VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Almost 3,000 elementary school students and an unknown number of adults on Wednesday participated in the second state Department of Agriculture's (PDA) Farm-City Day event at the PDA headquarters building in Harrisburg.

Although the official Farm-City Week is annually held the week ending Thanksgiving Day, and the state has been involved in Farm-City Days for years, the PDA initiated its first on-site Farm-City Day event last year. Based on its success, the event was continued this year.

Last year about 500 youth attended the event, which involves many of the PDA staff.

For those unfamiliar with Farm-City Day activities, they are held as a means for agriculturally employed and non-agriculturally employed people to get to know and appreciate each other better.

The goal has been that simple, though the mission has sometimes been difficult to maintain, given the fact that fewer than 2 percent of the population is directly involved with production farming, and many of the current generation of people are two to three generations removed from farming as a means for direct sustainment.

As the general labor employment of the population of the United States changed dramatically from farm, mining and timbering work to factory, manufacturing and service work, the culture of the new communities based on the new types of employment developed a void of first-hand knowledge of farming, land issues, and rural and environmental concerns.

Even more significantly, a philosophical chasm seemed to develop between city and rural people, that continues today. The chasm seems to concern the nature of the relationship of human beings to plants and animals.

One of the efforts of Farm-City Day events is to present the relationship of agriculturally produced plants and animals to everyday commodities and products, in an effort to educate the general public about their everyday reliance on a strong and healthy agricultural industry.

While some community Farm-City Day events are designed to provide a forum for both city and farm people to learn more about each other, the PDA event is designed more to have an impact on children.

Wednesday's program carried the theme, "Farm City Week. A Story to be Told — Lessons to be Learned."

The theme was the concept of state Secretary of Agriculture Samuel E. Hayes Jr., who has been a long-time advocate of promoting education and agriculture.

"This year's edition of PDA's Farm City Day was another great success," Hayes said. "Agriculture has a wonderful story to be told and there are many lessons for our young students to learn."

Free candy apples, and a few mild midway type rides were several of the not-strictly agricultural activities included.

However, the event is designed to avoid boring the youth with dry, force-fed lectures about the importance of agriculture, but rather to provide an atmosphere, similar to a county fair (that they may later want to visit), of fun and adventure.

The PDA building sits along Cameron Street across from the state Farm Show Complex, where PDA vehicle and some guest parking was temporarily relocated for the event.

The parking lot of the PDA building, the front steps, landing, lobby, first floor and basement, side yard, and an area behind one of the greenhouses were used for the event.

On the steps of the PDA building, 13-year-old country singing entertainer Crystal Marie, dressed in white Stetson and cowgirl attire,

Beetles Prove An Effective Weapon In Controlling Flies

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — Farmers may have new weapons for the war on disease-carrying flies in layer and broiler houses.

Those weapons could surprise you.

In the past, researchers knew about the effects of using the "hister beetle" (known scientifically as Carcinops Pumilio) to live in poultry house manure and eat fly eggs and larvae.

But research by Penn State and independent companies are closing in on ways to mass-produce beetles that each can eat up to 150 fly eggs a day.

Penn State has been studying the hister beetle for many years, according to Charlie Pitts, Penn State professor of entomology. Pitts said the beetle is an insect that is native to the country, which, according to the literature, was transmitted through "cow piles" from Buffalo herds to cow herds. The beetle, transmitted across the U.S., eventually ended up from the cow piles into poultry houses.

A company operated by Roni Clark and Leon Beiler, C & M Farm Services in Elizabethtown, manages a hister program to tackle the fly problem. The natural fly parasites include wasps, beneficial nematodes, and the carcinops beetle.

Working under a USDA Small Business Innovation Research Grant, IPM Laboratories, Locke, N.Y., has come up with a way to mass-produce the beetles. C & M Farm Services has an exclusive contract to sell the beetles in three states, according to Carol Glenister, president of IPM Laboratories.

Measuring less than ⅛ inch in length, each adult beetle can

Quality Haymaking In Foraging Around

To get good hay, you have to feed it. "Fertilizer pays. It doesn't cost you," said Joel Steigman, who farms 250 acres at two separate sites below Broad Mountain near Halifax. Steigman won first place for his alfalfa-timothy grass at the 1998 Hay Show during Ag Progress Days. He is profiled in the special section this issue, Foraging Around. Photo by Andy Andrews

NAZARETH (Northampton Co.) — Crisp, clear weather allowed a lot of shelled corn harvesting to take place the past week. Bill Sandt, farm manager of Windhaven Farms in Nazareth, takes a break from harvesting corn off of Penn Dixie Road. The 10-acre field was yielding in the range of 30-150 bushels per acre. Photo by Andy Andrews

Set Clocks Back Tonight

Time has come to change from Daylight Saving Time back to Eastern Standard Time. We "fall back" one hour at 2 a.m. Sunday morning, Oct. 25. To get that extra hour of sleep, turn the clocks back one hour before you go to bed Saturday night. Animal feeding and milking schedules also need to be adjusted accordingly.

DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY

Cash wheat bids finished mixed, with pressure due to active hard red winter wheat planting in the Southwestern U.S. and lack of fresh export sales. Strength in wheat came from fund buying on the Boards. Corn bids were slightly higher in reaction to continued good export orders. Gains however, were limited due to rapid harvest progress. Soybean bids were steady to weak on increased harvest progress and some profit taking on the board. Light export sales overnight, underpinned bids. Wheat mixed. Corn steady to 2 cents higher. Sorghum steady to 5 cents higher. Soybeans steady to 3 cents lower.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

OCT. 26-NOV. 1, 1998

ALL SAINTS, NOV. 1.

ALL HALLOW'S EVE

In ancient times, it was believed that on All Hallow's Eve (known as Samhain to the Celts), the spirits of the dead could visit the living before the long, cold winter to come People lit bonfires and made lanterns by hollowing out potatoes or turnips to carry coals from the fire, similar to our modern-day jack-o'-lanterns These beacons lit the way for the wandering spirits who visited on Samhain. In the Celtic calendar, Samhain meant "summer's end," and the spirit of Samhain was celebrated by making offerings to the dead and thanking the summer god for the fine weather and continued light that was just drawing to a close.

Things are seldom what they seem . . .

– William S Gilbert

TIP OF THE WEEK

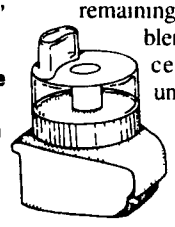
CREAMY PUMPKIN SOUP

2 cups chopped onions
3 tablespoons butter
2 cups cooked pumpkin (fresh or canned)
1 carrot, diced
1 potato, diced
2 apples, peeled, cored, and diced
4 cups water
1-1/2 cups milk or apple juice
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
salt and pepper, to taste

Sauté the onions in the butter, then add the other vegetables, apples, and water Bring to a boil, and simmer for 20 minutes Remove from heat, add remaining ingredients, and blend in a food processor or blender until creamy Serve hot



Makes 4 to 6 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

A good nut year, a good corn year.

If on All Saints Day the beech acorn is dry, we stick behind the stove in winter.

Flowers in bloom late in autumn indicate a bad winter.

OPINION

Aquaculture Finally Agriculture

We wish to be among the first to offer a welcome to Pennsylvania's aquaculture industry as a new official member of the state's agricultural family.

Up until now aquaculture was not legally regarded as agriculture in Pennsylvania.

In fact, it was only within the past decade that the wet world of growing food and fiber received even federal recognition and status.

But with the state Legislature coming through with its promise of legislation to send to the governor, and the quick signing by Gov. Tom Ridge on Oct. 16, the reasons why aquaculture has been slighted for so long are suddenly unimportant.

It's officially here.

A rapidly dwindling supply of the world's wild aquatic foods, a growing human population, and a tightening of space available for traditional agricultural species and practices have been some of the major forces supporting the growth of commercial-scale aquaculture.

Aquaculture can provide solutions to problems that don't get solved because of other people's and business's conflicts of interest.

Technological advances, and, in most cases, low environmental impacts are some of the highly attractive features that aquaculture has always enjoyed, even if not always appreciated.

Further, aquaculture provides a new entreprenuerial frontier for everyday people.

It is a frontier because it is not yet locked up and price-controlled.

There is opportunity: not every aquatic species or product in demand has been produced in an aquacultural setting, much less produced in such great quantities as to prevent other small businesses from becoming established.

The state law has been amended to include aquaculture within the realm of agriculture, and though state officials and the Legislature have for some time provided aquaculture with some of the courtesys, respect and support provided the rest of the state's agricultural industry, the signing of law makes it clear what the farming of fish and aquatic life actually is — agriculture.

Welcome.

Now Is The Time

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Understand Frost Damage

If temperatures reach freezing before corn or soybeans reach maturity, damage will occur, according to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County extension agronomy agent.

With corn, maturity is reached when the black layer is formed at the base of the kernel. Soybeans reach maturity when the pods are no longer green.

At maturity, corn is roughly 35 percent moisture and soybeans are between 18 and 20 percent moisture.

At maturity neither crop will accumulate any more dry matter. Frost before maturity will reduce both quality and yields. Frost-damaged corn will have small and misshapen soft kernels. The incomplete development of the starch structure causes a pithy kernel.

A high percent of kernels break during handling. Low test weight, below 45 pounds per bushel, will result in low protein levels and low digestion.

Amino acid levels will be very variable. Frost-damaged soybeans will show green on elongated yellow beans that shrink to smaller than normal size after drying. Green beans are difficult to extract oil from and the oil content is reduced.

To Manage Frosted Corn

Appropriate management of frosted corn may help reduce yield losses and maintain the feeding value, according to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County extension agronomy agent. Frost damage to corn will occur whenever temperatures remain below 32 degrees for 4 to 5 hours or anytime the temperature declines to 28 degrees, even if for only a few minutes. Negligible losses will occur if the grain has already dried to 35 percent moisture or lower, even with a severe frost.

If any green leaves remain after the frost, even leaves below the ear, the corn plant will continue to live and mature. This will increase it s dry matter content.

A good rule of thumb to remember — let frosted corn stand as long as there are green leaves and the ear has not former the black layer.

To Use Frosted Corn And Soybeans

The best use of frosted corn is for animal feed.

Robert Anderson, Lancaster County extension agronomy agent, reminds us that frosted corn should be tested so that your feeding program may be supplemented with additional protein or amin acids.

Fungi may present a problem You will need to check for fung growth during storage.

Expect storage time to be re duced by as much as 50 percen The best use of frosted soybeans i also livestock feed. Processor will discount for green beans. Th green must be refined out of th oil.

Oil from immature beans ofte contains high levels of free fatt acids which causes rancidity Meal from immature beans wil contain more residual oil than the normal 0.5 to 1.0 percent.

Direct marketing from the field will usually result in the highest discount for green soybeans. Cleaning and proper drying may improve the marketability of these beans.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

THE "LITTLE PEOPLE"

October 25, 1998

Background Scripture:
2 Kings 5 1-19
Devotional Reading:
2 Samuel 12:1-15

"He was a mighty man of valor, but he was a leper."

That was what people were say ing about the great Syrian general, Na'aman. He was the most famous military figure in Syria and had the full confidence of the Syrian king. But, he had a flaw: he was a leper and leprosy was one of the most feared diseases in the ancient world. He had a promising career ahead of him, but now all that was thrown into doubt.

In the case of Na'aman (NAY-uh-mon) it was a physical affliction, but almost anything can ruin a life, spoil a career, jeopardize a relationship or threaten a faith. "He would have been a great CEO, but he's got that drinking problem!" "She has a great voice, but she's a hypochondriac!" "They'd be a great couple, if only they weren't always putting each other down."

You probably can write some of your own "yes, but's" and "if only's." What is it in your own life that keeps you from being the person God created you to be, that keeps you from fulfilling your God-given potential, that spoils the good life that God gave you? What might people say of you: "He/she is fine, but..."?

END OF A CAREER?

That might have been the end of the great general's career, except for a little nobody who had no reason to help Na'aman, but did anyway. She is one of those little people, who at the right time and place can make an important difference, even if we never learn even their name. All we know of her is that she was an Israelite who had been kidnapped in one of Na'aman's raids and made a slave in his household.

From a strictly human standpoint, she should have hated Na'aman and his wife But, struck by the plight of her master, she said "Would that my lord were with the prophet who is in Samaria! He would cure him of his leprosy" (5:3). Something higher than "an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth" was at work in this little nameless Israelite maid

How often does a prominent persons take advice from one of these "little people"? Not very often, unless... there's nowhere else to go. Na'aman had obviously exhausted all his known alternatives, including the Syrian religion But he was desperate and when people are desperate they may turn to anyone they can for help I can't imagine how often I have witnessed that Sometimes, that is the only way people come to God.

INSECURE & PARANOID

So, Na'aman goes off to Israel hoping for a cure from what otherwise would seem a most unlikely source. The reaction of Samaria's king is human and humorous. Self-centered and extremely insecure, he interprets Na'aman's request a pretext by the Syrian king to cause him trouble: "Only consider, and see how he is seeking a quarrel with me" (5:7). There are some people who are so paranoid that they interpret everything in life as a personal threat.

Na'aman finally arrives at Elisha's home with a grand entourage of horses and chariots. So he is insulted when, instead of coming to meet him, the prophet sends a messenger with a simple prescription: "Go and wash in the Jordan seven times, and your flesh will be restored" (5:10). Na'aman was furious—didn't Elisha know who he was? Did he not realize how important he was? Angry and petulant, he was ready to turn around and go home.

Once again, however, one of those "little people" saved the day for Na'aman. Some nameless servants took considerable courage to say to this angry man: "My father, if the prophet had commanded you to do some great thing, would you not have done it? How much rather, then, when he says to you, 'Wash, and be clean?'" (5:13).

So, because he had nowhere else to go for help, Na'aman overcame his pride and prejudice and let some of the "little people" lead him to the most important healing he would ever experience.

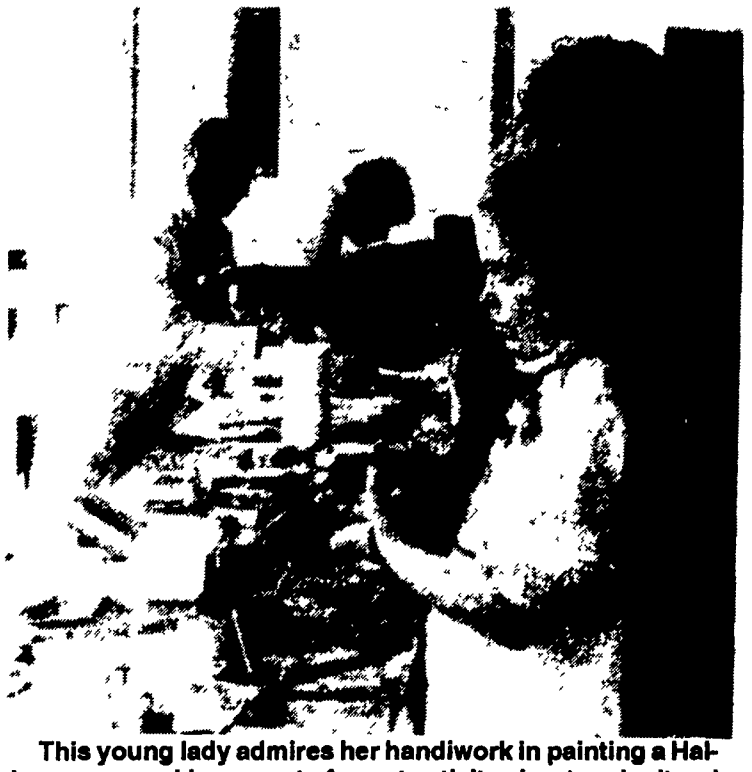
belted out a repertoire of country hits as well as other currently popular songs such as the theme to the movie "Titanic."

In between sets, she signed numerous autographs.

Two mounted state police were on hand, talking to children and adults about their horses and for what and how they are used.

Three rows of tables were set up in the lot where PDA employees distributed the 3,000 packets of agricultural information they put together to give to the students.



This young lady admires her handiwork in painting a Halloween pumpkin, as part of an art activity about agricultural products and traditional festivities. In the background, a couple of PDA employees dressed in white lab coats help the youth with their painting.

At a booth of the Pennsylvania Nut Growers Association, these children, several clutching apples, look at the variety of nuts that can and are grown in the state. The nut meats and several nut crackers were on display as well.

Other employees volunteered to wear costumes of Hershey's candy characters and roaming the grounds with another volunteer escort, making sure the costume wearer didn't fall.

The costume wearers received lots of hugs and smiles.

The Elizabethtown Area High School band played songs, that some of the children began to spontaneously dance to while waiting in line for a ride or an apple, or while watching Deputy Secretary Chris Herr shear sheep, or painting a Halloween decoration.

A radio station was on hand to continue providing music in the absence of Crystal Marie or the school band performing.

For hours the grounds were filled with hundreds to thousands of kids, until winding down in the afternoon.

"Best Kept Secret In The Poultry Business"

L.B.WHITE® Infraconic Heat Efficiency

By maximizing the conversion of gas to radiant energy, the L.B. White Infraconic gives you more heat for your fuel dollar as well as a broader area of heat output and more consistent temperature at bird level. With more consistent temperatures and a larger 'comfort zone', the infraconic helps your birds grow by keeping them warm, making it easier for them to find feed and water, and keeping the litter drier.
Lightweight and easy to install, the Infraconic is also simple to clean and maintain. And because the Infraconic hangs higher than other brooders, it's easier to work around during production or clean out.
L.B. White Infraconic brooders are available in 17,100 and 34,200 Btuh outputs, as well as your choice of LP or natural gas.

Winter Is Soon Here, Are Your Heaters Ready?

Flexible and economical heat:
•Models to meet different needs, with heat outputs from 20,000 to 325,000 Btuh, plus variable outputs for greater heating efficiency.
•All models are available for use with propane or natural gas
•Compact profiles and indoor or outdoor mounting capability for easy installation and efficient use of space.
Reliable and durable:
•Sentinel System III advanced diagnostic controls monitor all primary heater functions for dependable worry-free operation.
•Sentinel System III diagnostics pinpoint potential heater interruptions quickly and accurately to save time and money.

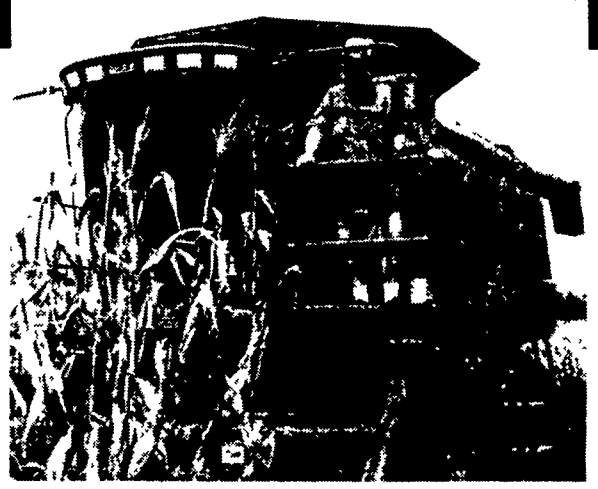
HOOBER MADE THIS DEERE MAN SEE RED



ADVANCED MACHINER SERVICE

"I was Green for several years, but Hoober gave me a great deal on a Case 7130 tractor and I loved it. After that, it just kind of snowballed. Another tractor, a combine, a Krause Landsman and a Krause disc. It's because of Hoober's service and the way they treat me that made me switch."

Dee Watson, Smyrna, DE

Dee Watson could never imagine not owning John Deere equipment. But several years ago Dee found himself in need of a tractor. A great deal from Hoober, Inc. on a Case IH 7130 made him decide to try something other than a Deere and things haven't been the same since. Hoober's outstanding service technicians and knowledgeable sales staff have turned Watson into a loyal Hoober customer for all his farm machinery needs. "Hoober has great equipment and great service. The guys really know what they're doing. They fix things right the first time. I love the Case and Krause machinery I've gotten from Hoober and I'd never get anything else."

PFGC Announces Forage Spokesperson Competition

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Have you ever read an article in a newspaper or magazine, or listened to a forage specialist of industry representative speak about forages and forage crop management, and thought, "Sure wish I could share my knowledge and experiences I have had with forages with other producers!"?

Well, the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council (PFGC) can grant you your wish.

If you are interested in giving a short 10-minute presentation about your forage operation and your experiences in raising forages, we will give you that opportunity. If fyou are willing to "tell your story about forages," let us know.

Forage producers who are interested should provide the following information by Nov. 20 to J. Craig Williams, (717) 724-9120, fax (717) 724-6819, email jcw17@psu.edu:

1. Spokesperson: Name, Address, Telephone and fax.
2. Nominator: Name, Address, Telephone and fax.
3. Spokesperson Qualifications:
   - Speaking ability.
   - Innovation as a forage producer.
   - Participation and/or leadership in local, state and/or national Forage Council activities.
   - Soundness of the farming operation.
   - Briefly describe (two paragraphs) the spokesperson's farming operation.

The first place winner will then represent Pennsylvania and the PFGC at the 1999 American Forage and Grassland Council (AFGC) Conference in Nebraska in February 1999 in the North America Forage Spokesperson Contest. AFGC conference and travel expenses will be covered by the PFGC. All participants in the AFGC contest will receive an honorarium and the first three place winners will receive cash awards and plaques. The second place winner in the PFGC contest will serve as the alternate from Pennsylvania.

The PFGC and AFGC contests will be run and judged using the same rules and scoring procedures. Talks must be no longer than 10 minutes in length. Judges will then ask the spokesperson questions about their farm operation for an additional two minutes. Contestants are encouraged to work closely with their county extension agent, crop adviser, industry representative, or a PFGC board member in the preparation of their presentation.

destroy an average of 54 housefly eggs per day per beetle at 80 degrees Fahrenheit per day.

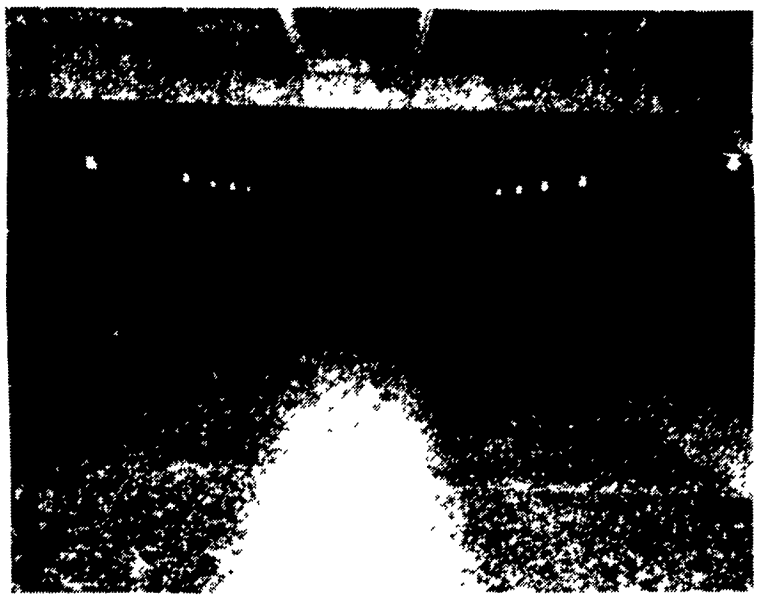
According to IPM Laboratories, well-fed female beetles lay serveral eggs per day and live more than three months. The beetles take 3-4 weeks to mature from egg to adult at 86 degrees Fahrenheit. Hister beetle larvae are active and voracious predators of housefuly eggs and young fly maggots, according to IPM Laboratories.

Within eight weeks, the beetles can produce enough larvae and adult beetles to eat house fly eggs. Generally when adult beetle populations are 40 per square foot or higher, fly control is usually adequate without additional measures.

Adult beetle populations typically reach 100 or more per square foot. IPM Laboratories indicated it has "frequently observed beetle densities as high as 250 beetles per quart of manure or 12 beetles per square inch of manure."

Under suitable conditions, fly control is achieved in 10-12 weeks and will continue until cleanout.

Using beetle eggs from IPM Laboratories, Clark and Beiler were able to transfer the carcinops to layer house complexes in Lancaster. This is in culmination of research undertaken by the University of North Carolina, Cornell, and Penn State.



Clark and Beiler were able to transfer the carcinops to layer house complexes in Lancaster County.

IPM Laboratories has been working for several years to develop a method to mass-produce the beetle and successfully implement it into layer houses in the area.

Clark, who has worked in the poultry industry for 10 years, has "read a lot of books on pest management and fly control," he said. The company wants to tackle the "whole issue" of pest management using nontoxic methods.

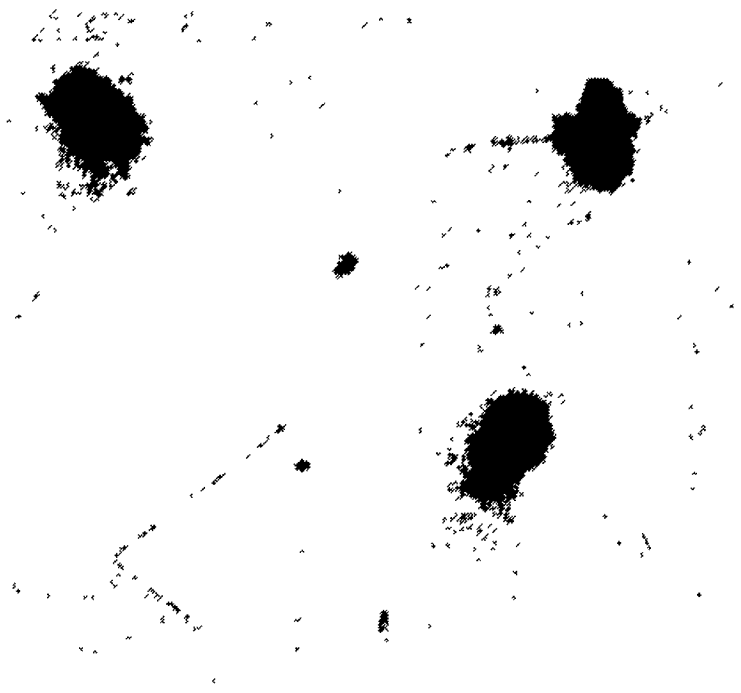
Clark noted the challenge was to come up with methods to allow producers to rethink their pest management strategies.

Instead of using expensive and unreliable chemical controls, a natural way of keeping flies under control in houses was needed.

In August, the company successfully implemented the beetle program in a Lancaster County poultry house. In all, about 50,000-60,000 beetles were released in in 30 different sections of the house for 95 percent control of the flies, according to Clark. After the beetles reproduced, in a couple of months, the IPM Laboratories found 8-10 beetles per half pint of manure, according to Glenister. The beetles are self-replicating.

The beetle population rises and falls according to the amount of fly egg "food" that exists. The whole "ecosystem" of the layer or broiler house adjusts accordingly. IPM Laboratories has even come up with a way to trap the beetles (called the "Hister House") and clean the manure out.

Clark said that, in many cases, the costs can be readily justified compared to other control methods. The houses are healthier and diseases can be readily controlled.



In the past, researchers knew about the effects of using the "hister beetle" (known scientifically as Carcinops Pumilio) to live in poultry house manure and eat fly eggs and larvae.

The beetles provide a more stable environment, especially since the advent of avian influenza (A.I.) There are no harmful side effects from using the beetles, according to Clark.

Beetles can be placed in broiler, layer, and pullet houses. In fact, producers can use the beetles in any livestock, manure-producing operation to control flies.

Regarding the beetle, Penn State's research has not centered on mass-producing the beetles in a laboratory; instead, the focus has been on whether the beetles can carry Salmonella Enteritidis (SE) bacteria and the avian influenza (A.I.) virus.

So far, laboratory results were conclusive about salmonella, according to Pitts. Working in conjunction with the Penn State Department of Veterinary Science, Pitts has found out that the beetles, if not carefully handled, can transmit the salmonella bacteria in the house.

Clark noted the beetles raised at IPM Laboratories are guaranteed SE-free.

Within the next several weeks, Penn State will be looking into whether the beetle can carry the A.I. virus.

Sen. Santorum Receives Farm Bureau Award

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

LEWISTOWN (Mifflin Co.) — While Washington, D.C. may seem acres away from the family farm, some Mifflin County farmers were lucky enough to personally meet one of their main agricultural influences in the U.S. Legislature.

U.S. Sen. Rick Santorum stopped recently at the Lewistown farm of Marlin, Manila, and Mark Ellinger to accept the Friend of the Farm Bureau Award from the American Farm Bureau Federation and the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau.

Santorum serves on the Senate Agriculture Committee while Mark Ellinger is Mifflin County Farm Bureau president.

Joel Rotz, director of National Legislative Programs with the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, presented the award.

"Farm Bureau recognizes those members of Congress who have demonstrated a high level of support for key issues of importance to Farm Bureau. Sen. Santorum has been a strong supporter of necessary funding for agricultural research and crop insurance programs," Rotz said. "Without proper funding for agricultural research to keep our nation's agriculture competitive and on the cutting edge, and government programs that help farmers manage their risks, we will not continue to be the world leader we are today."

Santorum, a Republican from Pittsburgh, said he knew little about agriculture.

"When I got to the Senate, I decided the best way to learn about an issue is to get on a committee where you're forced to learn about it."

According to Rotz, Santorum has suported "fiscal responsibility through a balanced budget along with significant tax cuts that include reductions in the capital gains tax, 100 percent health insurance deductions for the self-employed, and higher exemptions from estate taxes. These tax cuts provide relief to America's farmers as well as other small businesses that make up the backbone of our national economy. It's tax relief like this that will help spur more investment in farming operations and improve opportunities for future generations to continue family farm operations."

Santorum and seven United States representatives, including Rep. Bud Shuster, received the awards. The awards, presented every congressional session, are based on four or five farmer-friendly votes on national issues.

After the awards presentation, Santorum said, "It's nice to be in front of a group of farmers and not have anyone comment on milk prices." He then laughed as one farmer said that that was his first question on the list.

Santorum fielded questions about the Food Quality Protection Act and the use of pesticides. Santorum said he doesn't understand the movement which advocates the use of little or no pesticides. Food production in the United States would decrease and more land, such as in the rain forests, would be cleared to grow more food.

Santorum spent about one hour at the farm.

The Ellingers farm 165 acres of corn, hay, and soybeans on a farm that's been in the family sine 1955.

Mark said he has had an interest in politics since joining the organization 20 years ago. He has served as governmental relations director and on the local State Senate Legislative Committee and the National Legislative Committee. He is also a Granville Township director.

Average Farm Feed Costs For Handy Reference

To help farmers across the state to have handy reference of commodity input costs in their feeding operations for DHIA record sheets or to develop livestock feed cost data, here's last week's average costs of various ingredients as compiled from regional reports across the state of Pennsylvania.

Remember, these are averages, so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

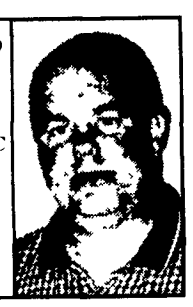
Dairyman To Dairyman



GEORGE CUDOC
PA DHIA
Dairyman

QUESTION: At harvest time we had the opportunity to buy wheat at an unheard of low price. May vet and feed person both said wheat would be a good way to stretch my high moisture corn that usually runs out before next year's harvest. We made the transition over a two-week period and yet our cows dropped in production immediately and have yet to come back to where they were before the change. I know that corn harvest is almost here, but should I bother to plant wheat this year, as I had planned? My milk drop resulted in almost $4,000 less milk sold over the wheat-feeding period. This cheap wheat doesn't seem so cheap to me now.

ANSWER: Wheat used in dairy cattle should be a very available source of energy, mostly as a starch carbohydrate.

What took place at this farm can lead to a lot of frustration, not only for the dairyman who lost the chance to make cheaper milk due to smart purchasing of a good feed, but also for his feed advisors who feel a bit responsible for the lack of success in attaining the goal of cutting costs without sacrificing production.

Assigning or assuming blame in most cases accomplishes nothing, but the chance to avoid such failures in the future can be of real benefit.

To solve this mystery of less than desirable performance, we have some very good tools to work with, both on a chemical and physical level.

Looking at some physical properties of the cow, we can shed some light on what has probably happened here.

At some point in problem solving, we need to stand back and look at what is too easy, too simple, and even too absurd to consider.

Manure is the answer! You have to make light about a subject like manure.

Seriously, the knowledge that we can gain by making a habit of studying the manure of our cows can go a long way in avoiding problems such as milk production losses when we make feeding changes.

The first clue that something was going wrong was that, when the wheat was fed, bits and pieces of wheat came through in the manure. This unused portion of feed that the cow was supposed to utilize as energy was only fertilizing the fields that it was spread upon.

Grains used for carbohydrates in a cow's diet must be made available to her. You can accomplish this by processing all grains physically, chemically, or a combination of the two.

Seed grains, like wheat and corn, have a protective shell around them that can inhibit microbial breakdown in the rumen and pass undigested out into manure.

Grind these types of grains fine to get the most from them.

In the high-producing cow, we must allow her every opportunity to digest her diet quickly because of the large amount of feed that moves in and out of her digestive system at a rapid rate, daily.

Chemically altered grain — like high moisture, steam flaked, and soda treated — has already made these grains a step or two closer to being digested, and therefore in less need of physical preparation.

The next tool that this farm had at its disposal is a little more sophisticated than scoring manure, and, when used extensively, can provide monthly feedback data about how we can best balance and deliver diets to our cows.

Milk component analysis provides us with vital information concerning the nutrient needs of the dairy cow. MUN, which is used on about 33 percent of the Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association member farms, is the one component that has the best potential in solving the type of problem in today's question.

Research and database studies have coupled MUN output with protein utilization in the diet of the dairy cow. The diet in this particular herd maintained the same percent of crude protein (CP), percent UIP, percent DIP, percent nonstructural carbohydrate (NSC), and percent dry matter (DM), even though wheat was being utilized in replacement of some high moisture corn.

The herd remained reasonably constant at 13.7 MUN from the first of the year on, with a slight climb in May to 15.1.

Within three weeks of making the change to include wheat in the diet, the MUN rose to 18.4.

Protein totals and portions remained the same, but the NSC portion available to the cow dropped.

The diet was balanced for the same level of percent NSC, but what the cow could actually use was altered.

With MUN analysis done on a monthly basis, we can quickly make changes to the diet makeup, diet delivery, or a combination of the two. The cows tell us what is going on by component evaluation.

We can then better predict the outcome of feeding management changes that we all will suffer through at one time or another. What we can measure we can manage, and what we manage we hope to control.

This is a typical way in which we can combine good tools that we have at our disposal.

The best tool is the good "cow sense" that many dairymen use on a day-to-day basis.

Developing such techniques, such as manure scoring, and adding that to what we already know will encourage looking for the problem woth a different perspective.

MUN testing and analysis is a perfect fit to take that cow sense and knowledge to the next level.

This is what today's dairying is all about, regardless of size or scale.

The last thing I asked this dairyman, who also happens to be a friend of mine, was why he didn't ask someone about the big MUN change sooner. His answer was that he didn't want to sound stupid. That's the only part of the whole situation that seems near stupid to me.

Looking forward to questions from you.

Maryland To Host NE Collegiate Soil Judging

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — If you happen to see youthful dirt-loving persons emerging from southern Maryland pits during Thursday-to-Saturday daytime hours next week, don't fear a Halloween danse macabre (dance of death) gathering.

What you're probably seeing is ag students from nine colleges and universities who are participating in the Northeast Regional Collegiate Soil Judging Contest, an annual October event being held in Maryland for the first time since 1990

The actual contest will be held somewhere in Anne Arundel County on Oct. 31, rain or shine. The exact location is kept secret from participants until the day of the contest.

But practice judgin pits will be available on Oct. 29 and 20 at several sites in Anne Arundel and Prince George's counties. One of the practice pits will be located at the University of Maryland's Upper Marlboro facility of the Central Maryland Research and Education Center (former tobacco research farm) at 2005 Largo Road, four miles north of Upper Marlboro.

This year's event is being hosted by the Department of Natural Resource Sciences and Landscape Architecture in the College of Agricultural and Natural Resources at the University of Maryland. Collaborating organizations include the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Natural Resources Conservation Service in Maryland and the Smithsonian Environmental Research Center near Edgewater.

Delvin S. Fanning, professor of soil science at the University of Maryland, chairs the planning committee for this year's contest. He is being assisted by Steve Birch, a graduate student and former UM soil judging team member. Fanning noted that Maryland hosted the national collegiate soil judging contest in 1994.

Helping to locate a contest site for this year's contest were Richard A. Weismiller and Mark Haddon. Weismiller chairs the UM Department of Natural Resource Sciences and Landscape Architecture. Haddon is director of educational programs at the Smithsonian Environmental Research Center.

Colleges and universities expected to be represented in the contest include Ohio State, Penn State, Cornell University of Connecticut, University of Rhode Island, and the University of New Hampshire. Also, Wilmington College of Wilmington, Ohio; Delaware Valley College of Doylestown, Pa.; and the University of Maryland, College Park. Coaching the Maryland team will be Martin C. Rabenhorst, professor of soils. He will be assisted by John Wah, a UM graduate student. Rabenhorst was a student member of University of Maryland soil judging teams that won the Northeast regional championship in 1973 and 1974. He is a Maryland native. Dr. Mark Stolt, another UM alumnus and Maryland native, coaches this year's University of Rhode Island soil judging team.

Main Street Tractor Tour Comes To Area

COCHRANVILLE (Chester Co.) — Farmers will get to see and drive the new line of Case IH MX Series Magnum tractors at a field day hosted by Hoober, Inc. on Thursday, Oct. 29.

The field day, held on Glen Engle Farm southwest of Cochranville will feature the complete line of Case IH MX tractors as part of Case IH's Main Street Tractor Tour. And while there will be plenty of machinery on display, the center of attention figures to be the new MX Series Magnums.

Five new models, ranging from 145 to an industry-leading 235 PTO horsepower, will be available for farmers to learn about and test drive. According to Case IH, the new MX Series Magnums offer the industry's best combination of productivity, power, performance, comfort and convenience. In addition to the tightest turning radius in their class, the new MX Series Magnums also have a cab featuring increased visibility, ease of operation, and unsurpassed comfort.

The MX Series Magnums won't be the only equipment farmers can work out in the field. The MX Maxxum tractors will also be on hand, and those attending the field day will also be able to operate a Case IH Axial-Flow combine in corn.

Case IH representatives will be on hand to discuss the technology behind Advanced Farming Systems and how today's technology can help farmers make their land as productive as possible.

The field day will run from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. and lunch will be served. Glen Engle Farm is located ½ mile southwest of Cochranville on Rt. 10. Signs will direct guests to the field day site.

Erb was once part of Ephrata's past. 1851 The residence at 36 East Main Street was the Bank's home from 1884 until 1962.

My calendar has 365 days

The Ephrata National Bank has been providing loans and other banking services to farmers since 1881. Many of the philosophies that helped ENB enjoy more than a century of growth are as important today as they ever were. Take the way we calculate interest on loans. The traditional way to calculate interest on a loan is to use the number of days in a year, which on my calendar is 365. Many, if not most, lenders use a 360-day year.

What does that mean to you? Well, on a $100,000 loan at 8 1/2% (the current prime rate), your interest bill at ENB would be $8,500. If you paid interest on the basis of a 360-day year, your loan would cost you $8,618, or an annual difference of $118.

If you prefer the traditional way we calculate interest, give me a call. We've got lots to talk about.

Heat Stress - Article 20

Cows are negatively impacted by temperatures above about 75 to 80 degrees, and the impact is magnified by high humidities, hot nights and by any other stresses that are imposed upon cows at this same time The effects of heat stress can be devastating and long lasting, especially if they do not have the opportunity to release body heat over night and cool down

Thus our goal is to
- Protect cows from exposure to excess heat
- Help them dissipate heat from their body
- Minimize the amount of heat they produce
- Replenish minerals and fluids lost via excess excretions
- Minimize other sources of stress in hot weather

Some things that can be done to minimize heat stress include

Provide cows easy access to lots of water Ideally, the water should be close to their feeding and rest areas

Provide shade, and lots of it to help keep cows dispersed so they don't create "mastitis pits"

Provide breezes by giving cows access to a breezy knoll, or use fans House cows in a well-ventilated barn in the heat of the day It is most important that the fans exchange air to remove excess heat and humidity created by the cows, breezes are secondary Tunnel ventilation of tiestall barns is one option Stabling cows also has the advantage of providing cows a clean, comfortable rest area that is close to feed and water.

Use evaporative cooling, where appropriate Install sprinklers - not misters - that wet cows to the hide with coarse droplets of water Put the sprinklers on a timer and run them about 5 minutes out of every 15-20 minutes Don't keep the cows wet continuously To cool down they need to dry off It s the evaporation of moisture from the hide that cools them To aid the evaporation process, install circulation fans in the freestall area This will help to encourage cows to return to their stalls to cool down, and to lie down in a clean area, rather than in a sloppy feed alley Make provisions for handling extra water and slop in the feed alleys

If cows body temperatures rise to dangerously high levels and they are panting excessively, it may be necessary to hose them down Consult your veterinarian

Reduce cows' activity and excitement so they don't generate more heat

Increase the energy density of the ration, feed less fiber and more grain but be very sure to meet cows minimum needs for forage and fiber The digestion of forages generates more heat than the digestion of grains When feeding more grain, it may be beneficial to add more buffers to the ration, but not to the point that it impairs intake due to palatability problems

Feed more minerals to replenish what was lost due to increased excretion of fluids

Feed most of the forages in the cooler hours of the night, but remember cows' body temperatures do not drop until 4 or 5 hours after the sun starts going down

Breed cows so they do not freshen nor have to be bred in the heat of summer Hot weather kills conception, and it may be months before affected cows recover and start to conceive

State Farm-City Event

Centre Hall, owners of past Farm Show supreme draft horse champions, were on hand with Percherons and a carriage, trotting back and forth in the parking lot.

Special needs dogs were on display, the PDA Bureau of Dog Law had a display with a warden (field officer) at a booth with a trained golden retreiver who talked about caring and training a dog and how to avoid getting bitten, and how to avoid stray animals as a precaution to being bitten and perhaps being exposed to rabies.

Harwoods Development Council had a display with the Boni Brothers demonstrating chain saw carving. They carved several statues, and donated one of a four-foot high Bald Eagle on perch with a fish clutched in the talons of one claw foot.

The state Aquaculture Association had goldfish, koi and hybrid striped bass on display in aquariums in the lobby of the PDA building.

Edible insects — chocolate-covered roasted crickets — were the main attraction at an entomology booth near the aquarium, the PDA had its own display area and along one table pains and brushes donated by one of the participating schools and plywood cutouts to be painted donated by the PDA were provided and PDA staff helped the students paint their Halloween decorations.

Many weighed themselves for fun at the Bureau of Weights and Measures' display; DEP had a hands-on demonstration about erosion control and nutrient management; Northern FFA had a petting zoo with baby pigs and Milton Hershey School provided a variety of animals, goats, sheep, rabbits, etc. for the young students to see and touch. Morgan Firestine brought her Polled Hereford heifer project animal for display.

The building and grounds were filled with displays from a variety of agricultural concerns — from dogs to logs, and leaf to beef.

The PDA staff, commodity groups and agricultural associations that participated provided youth with interesting and attractive displays and activities.

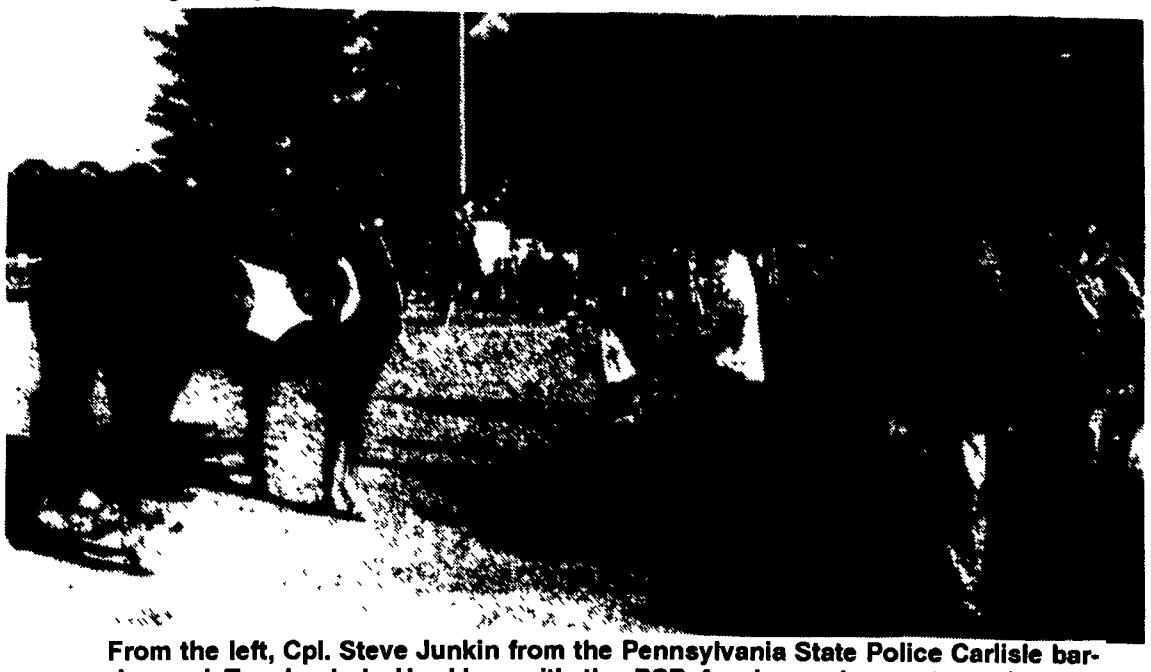
Children and adults were allowed to explore, to examine, to learn and to build their own self-esteem through gaining the knowledge they wanted to take, not what was being forced.

There were many and repeated comments about the wonderfulness of the event, coming from teachers, security officers, PDA employees, and students.

"Over 2,800 children experienced this 'Ag in the Classroom' event," Hayes said. "This event is a very positive opportunity to promote agriculture and educate our children."

For those interested in participating in the event, contact the PDA. For those interested in local activities, contact a local Extension office to find out about programs.

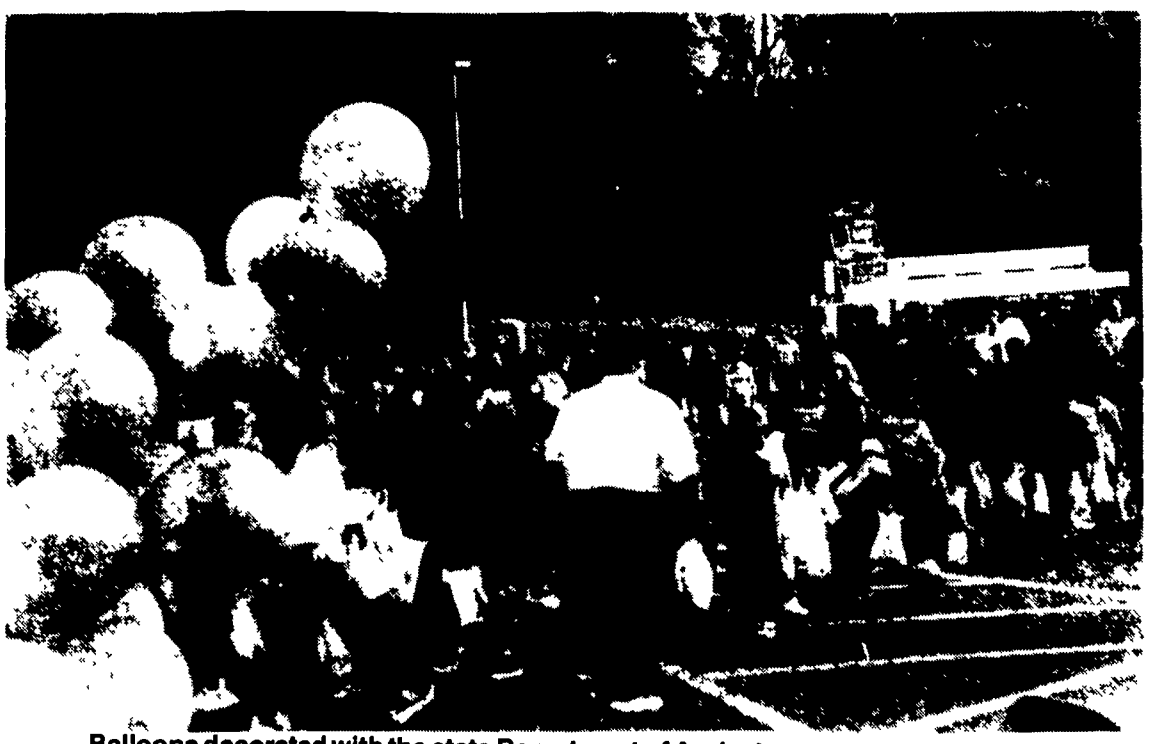
Randi Boni puts the finishing touches on this chainsaw artwork — a statue of a Bald Eagle on perch — while a small group of PDA Farm-City paricipants look on.



From the left, Cpl. Steve Junkin from the Pennsylvania State Police Carlisle barracks, and Trp. Lucinda Hawkins, with the PSP Academy, demonstrate the PSP mounted patrol.

The Elizabethtown Area High School Band peforms a song for the thousands of students and participants at the state Department of Agriculture Farm-City event.

Dog Warden Paulette Clark talks to students and teachers about dog care and handling, and how to stay away from strange dogs.



Balloons decorated with the state Department of Agriculture's new logo, "Products for the Planet" blow in the light fall breeze while hundreds of children make their way toward candy apples and midway rides, or busses back to school.

State Department of Agriculture employee Dottie Grenier is actually the person inside the Hershey's chocolate sauce costume character that is receiving all the warm hugs from the elementary students, while PDA employee Sharon Trostle helps out as escort. Grenier and Trostle work for the state Racing Commission and volunteered to help with the day's event.

Is The Mandatory Pork Checkoff Working For You?

Since the pork checkoff became mandatory the National Pork Board has collected $417,000,000.
But has it helped hog producers? No!
Here's what has happened:

- hog prices have been lower in 8 out of 12 years;
- 207,000 hog farmers have gone out of business;
- pork prices paid by consumers are 30% higher; while
- the hog farmer's share of the consumer dollar has dropped from 46¢ to 27¢.

The Campaign for Family Farms is circulating a petition calling for a vote to end the mandatory pork checkoff. Farmers who have sold at least one hog since January 1, 1997 and have paid into the checkoff can sign.

To sign the petition to end the mandatory pork checkoff, write to:

Striving For Quality? Take It Easy On The Hay, According To Halifax Producer

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

HALIFAX (Dauphin Co.) — Don't over-rake it. Don't beat it. Get it baled dry enough and as soon as possible.

Above all, to get good hay, you have to feed it.

"Fertilizer pays. It doesn't cost you," said Joel Steigman, who farms 250 acres at two separate sites below Broad Mountain near Halifax.

Steigman took home champion honors in Class 4, alfalfa grass mixed, later cutting, field dried, at the 1998 Hay Show during this year's Ag Progress Days.

All the alfalfa hay on the farm was topdressed with 0-15-30, in addition to soil testing recommendations where needed, according to Steigman. An important ingredient for champion hay, besides good soil tilth and pH, is the use of manure.

Steigman applies layer manure to the fields as needed. "I soil test all the time," he said.

He applies manure from 40-some head of feeder cattle, in addition to chicken manure, which is worked into the soil on a rotation. He maintains some cows and calves and buys feeders.

Joel Steigman took home champion honors in Class 4, alfalfa grass mixed, later cutting, field dried, at the 1998 Hay Show during this year's Ag Progress Days. He also maintains test plots of new alfalfa varieties on his farm. About seven acres with six different varieties are kept at the farm. The test plots are looking at the correct seeding rates for the hay. Photo by Andy Andrews

PAUL H. CRAIG
Pennsylvania Dept. of Ag
Nutrient Management

Did you know that Pennsylvania is the 10th largest producer of hay in the United States? I didn't!

Based on results from the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Department on an annual basis, Pennsylvania produces 4.7 million tons of hay on nearly 2.1 million acres.

Alfalfa is the state's largest single forage crop, making up slightly more than 800,000 acres and more than one-half the total hay production. In addition to hay production, there are more than 2.3 million acres of pasture in Pennsylvania.

The forage industry is a major agricultural enterprise in Pennsylvania and the northeastern United States. About 60 percent ($1.9 billion) of the total cash receipts from the sale of agricultural products in Pennsylvania are derived from meat and milk sales. In Pennsylvania there are approximately 720,000 milk cows, 216,000 beef cows, and 134,000 sheep. Forage crops constitute the major feed component in the diet of these animals, making forages the backbone of Pennsylvania's agriculture and rural economy.

In addition, forages are environ-

Striving For Quality?

Steigman farms on fields adjacent to Small Valley Hill on 100-foot wide strips that contain timothy and alfalfa mixes. The soil is a Calvin Leck Kill shaley silt loam. Steigman deals with the challenges of clay bottoms and some compaction on the fields.

Soil pH poses a challenge, especially in spots. "We lime regularly," he said.

Careful records are kept to ensure that the proper nutrients are available for all crops.

Steigman manages about 40-50 acres of corn on the two farms.

He grows about 30 acres of field soybeans. Some were double-cropped after barley. Steigman also grows 15 acres of edible beans for the organic market, and about 30 acres of straight alfalfa. He maintains about 40 acres of alfalfa- timothy mix.

Steigman noted this was the first year he participated in the annual contest at Ag Progress Days. He submitted three different samples in different categories. He may enter yet another category in next year's contest.

For the award-winning sample, "I went to the barn and picked out a square bale from the mow and that was it," he said. "I never thought to analyze it myself."

Steigman was surprised when the near-infrared forage testing revealed exactly how good the bale was at the contest.

The later-cutting alfalfa mix, harvested in mid-June, was the second cutting. The Hesston bales were taken as received — one of about 131 entries in 21 classes on Aug. 19 at the contest in Rockspring.

A note to Steigman reads: "Congratulations, Joel! Sample in Class #4 was a real beauty," by Marvin Hall, Penn State forage specialist and contest coordinator.

The mixed grass-legume hay sample showed an as-received analysis

(Turn to Page 7)

Steigman also wraps hay, including straight alfalfa, an alfalfa/ timothy mix, and straight grass (timothy and reed canarygrass), into large square bales. About 300 bales stand in outside storage for sale.

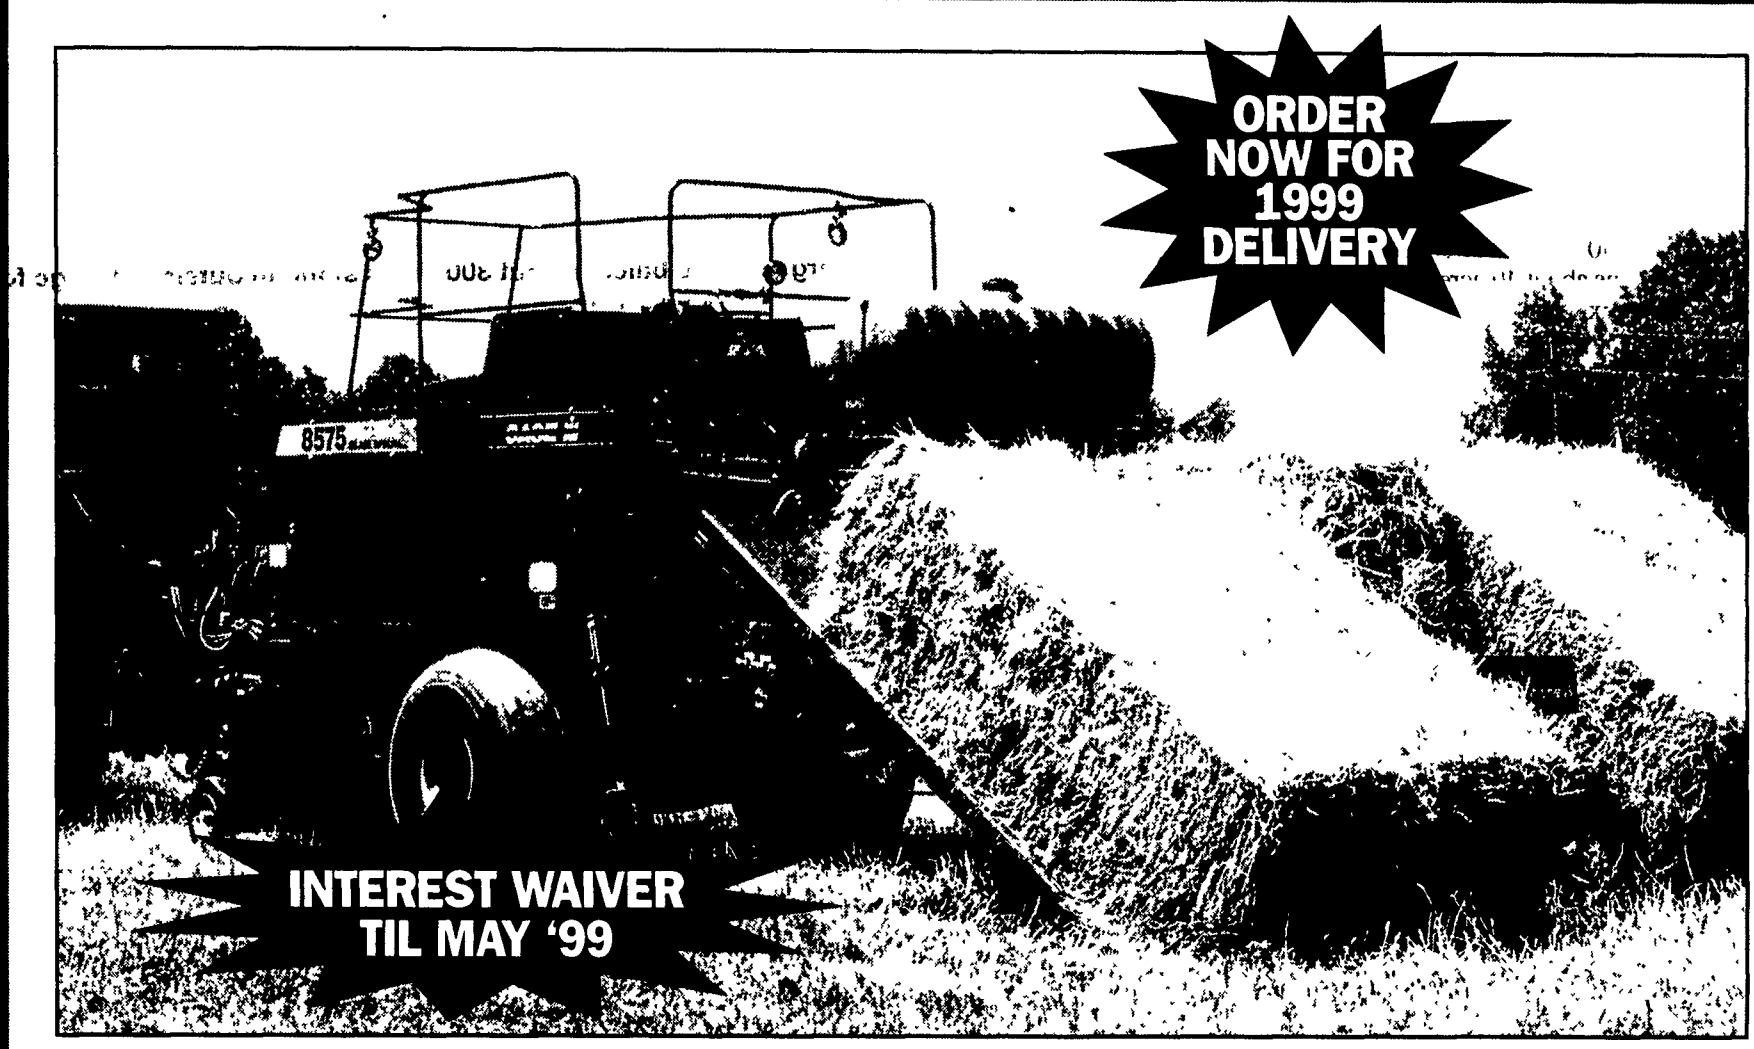
BALE A TON EVERY 3 MINUTES



More and more farmers are making hay the big way. More farmers are buying square balers from Hoober, Inc. With three models to choose from, the reasons to buy a CASE IH big square baler are clear:

Productivity

CASE IH big square bales are quick to handle, and that means you can be more productive. In fact, with a CASE IH big square baler you can bale up to 20 tons of hay per hour. And there's no stopping to tie and eject bales. That's 1 ton every 3 minutes.

Shipping

CASE IH big square bales give you large transport payload. Since bales are stackable, you can fit more hay into a limited area. The bottom line is more bales of hay per truckload.

High Moisture Capability

CASE IH 8575 & 8585 big square balers are built to handle high moisture hay and deliver consistent bale weight and density regardless of varying moisture conditions. CASE IH balers keep moisture in for better quality hay. Higher hay quality means more profits.

Less Leaf Loss

CASE IH big square balers are center-line balers and have an extra wide pick-up for increased capacity with less leaf loss. And a charge chamber preforms bale flakes for better leaf retention to ensure higher hay quality.

mentally friendly in that growing forages can reduce soil erosion and pesticide use. Also forages can increase soil structure and soil organic matter. And in times of high grain production levels and low commodity prices, forages can enhance agricultural profitability. That's why forages are important to all Pennsylvanians.

The Pennsylvania Forage and Grasslands Council (PFGC) is an organization that is dedicated to the production and utilization of forages. It is our goal to improve all phases of forage and grassland production to benefit forage producers and utilizers — and thereby increase profits of Pennsylvania farmers.

How do we do this? PFGC works with producers, industry, and educators to collect, evaluate, and share useful information to the cutting-edge forage producers. This is accomplished through the use of a state newsletter, Foraging Around, the national magazine from the American Forage and Grasslands Council. Forage workshops, field days, and assisting with events such as the state Grazing Conference.

Furthermore, PFGC sponsors a Hay Show at Ag Progress Days to stimulate high-quality hay production and to recognize those top producers. This year's show had a large increase in the number of hay samples and the overall quality of entries was exceptional. This is very closely related to the excellent lhay making weather that was experienced in Pennsylvania this year.

PFGC also supports the future of agriculture by awarding scholarships to students at Penn State University and Delaware Valley College who study forages and grassland management. PFGC also provides statewide recognition to individuals and organizations that have contributed to the forage industry in Pennsylvania. These people include farmers who promote forage production to their peers.

The PFGC organization is made up of forage producers, related industry representatives, and educators all having a shared interest in forages. For almost 40 years many individuals have contributed to the success of forage production in Pennsylvania. As this organization looks to the future, we have adopted the motto, "Providing Cutting Edge Information to Cutting Edge Forage Producers."

The leadership of this organization in Pennsylvania is committed to this goal. Won't you consider joining our organization and helping other forage producers in Pennsylvania to continue to produce profitable forage crops? To do so, a sign-up form is included in this issue of Foraging Around.

Grazing, Forage Conference March 3-4

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin. Co.) — The fifth annual statewide Pennsylvania Grazing and Forage Conference is scheduled March 3-4 here at the Holiday Inn.

This conference is planned as an educational opportunity and is sponsored by the Penn State University — USDA/ARS Grazing and Research Center and Pennsylvania Forage and Grasslands Council.

Speakers for this conference include Jim Gerrish, grazing specialist from Missouri and Pete LeVan, grazing specialist from Penn State's Haller Farms. In addition, farmer presenters will participate on the program. Topics to be addressed in this year's conference include improving pasture stands, storing excess spring growth, watering and animal behavior, custom harvesting of excess pasture, and custom [illegible] or dairy [illegible]

The commercial exhibtis at the past four conferences have been an integral part of the program. The planning committee anticipates a large, enthusiastic audience of dairy and livestock producers who will be interested in the latest fencing and water equipment as well as forage seed and production supplies.

In addition to pasture, most graziers will also grow other feed and fiber crops, and use brush cutter mowers, seeding equipment, fertililzer spreaders, and require additional dairy and livestock production services and supplies.

The conference will feature numerous presentations and discussions focusing on pastures. This conference is being co-sponsored by the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council and the Grazing Research and Education Center.

If you have interest in extending the grazing season, using TMR on pastures, custom heifer raising, improving your pastures, or which pasture plant species are best for your farm then you should make plans to attend the Grazing Conference at the Holiday Inn in Grantville. In addition to these topics, many of which will include experienced graziers as presenters, Dr. Jim Gerrish, a scientist from the University of Missouri, will be the keynote speaker.

Gerrish's grazing research has gained him a very strong national and international reputation as an excellent scientist who keeps his research applicable to the farm. Gerrish's research has focused on animal behavior and manure distribution in grazing systems. In addition, he has organized and taught Missouri's grazing school for many years.

At informally structured evening sessions on March 3, there will be the opportunity to ask questions and discuss with fellow farmers current concerns on your farm or the grazing industry.

In addition to the structured educational program, there will be a trade show with company representatives available to showcase the latest in grazing technology. If it is New Zealand-style milking facilities or fence insulators that you are interested in, you can learn about it and purchase it at the trade show.

For more information, contact Sue Eisenhauer at (814) 865-6541.

For more information about this press release, contact Marvin Hall at Penn State University, (814) 863-1019 or (mhh2@psu.edu).

of 9.9 percent moisture and 90.1 percent dry matter content. The sample tested at 18.8 percent protein. Calcium content was 1.22 percent, phosphorous 0.30 percent, potassium 2.10 percent, and magnesium .30 percent. Cattle TDN was at 66.23 percent and cattle NEL .69 percent.

Relative feed value stood at 158 percent.

Steigman sells a lot of hay through the Lancaster Farming mailbox market, what he calls a "hot deal. I sell a lot of hay through that," said Steigman. Many of his customers don't purchase hay on looks alone, but demand to look at the "pedigree" of the hay, the analysis that shows the relative feed value.

He said a lot of Amish customers analyze it or have their feed representative come and analyze it, and purchase it by the "way it feeds," said Steigman.

For those who need forage during the winter months, he provides a good source.

For him, that means taking care of the feed requirements of the crop.

"If you don't use fertilizer, you don't have anything," he said.

Steigman has been willing to test new markets and products. For the first time this year, he has tried growing edible soybeans for the organic food grade market.

Steigman also wraps hay, including straight alfalfa, an alfalfa/timothy mix, and straight grass (timothy and reed canarygrass), into large square bales. About 300 bales stand in outside storage for sale.

Steigman sprays inoculant on the hay as it is being baled for wrapping all the time.

Customers demand that the bales be

An Overview

At this time, over one-half million forage-producing acres exist in northeast Pennsylvania. Since the late 1980's that acreage has decreased approximately ten percent while livestock numbers have remained comparatively constant. The ability of the farmers in this region to market quality forages through livestock products will have a very large and direct influence on the economic well-being of their farms, agri-businesses, and of the greater economic community at large. Obtaining, handling and managing quality forages will remain of utmost importance in northeastern Pennsylvania.

Striving For Quality?

wrapped with an inoculant, contain no dirt, no manure, and are wrapped promptly after cutting. The bales are wrapped 19 times using three layers of one-mil plastic.

Steigman uses a 43-foot bale mover modified for square bales, which he purchased in the spring. Steigman used to use a payloader and load 45-foot tractor-trailers, which used to take too much time and caused compaction and plant damage. Now the bale mover reduces the manpower requirement to one person and minimizes compaction and plant damage. The bales are picked up immediately after baling and delivered to the wrapping lot.

He also maintains test plots of new alfalfa varieties on his farm. About seven acres with six different varieties are kept at the farm. The test plots are looking at the correct seeding rates for the hay.

He does his own timothy testing, looking into what variety works best at his farm. "Everybody's got the best," he said. But he needs evidence that one variety will succeed in combinations.

PFGC ❖ SPECIAL REPORT ❖

WINTER GRAIN FERTILITY

Douglas Beegle
Penn State Agronomist

As with any crop the fertility program for winter grains should be based on a regular soil testing program. Ideally, the soil levels for pH, phosphorus, and potassium should all be in the optimum range on the soil test report before planting. For wheat the pH should be between 6.0 and 7.0 and for barley it should be between 6.5 and 7.0. If the pH is low, the recommended limestone should be appliled and worked into the soil as far ahead of planting as possible. If the magnesium is low, a dolomitic type lime should be used.

Both wheat and barley take up large amounts of phosphorus and potassium. If soil tests are in the low range, nutrients must be applied to build the soil up into the optimum range plus replace what is removed in the crop. For soils already in the optimum range, the recommendation only considers replacing what is removed. At high soil test levels there may be adequate nutrients in the soil to supply what the crop removes without any added phosphorous or potassium, in which case, the recommendation will be zero.

For winter grains, all of the recommended phosphorus and potassium should be broadcast applied prior to planting. A small portion of this requirement can be applied through the drill.

To minimize fertilizer injury, do not apply more than 30 pounds per acre of the recommended nitrogen plus potash through the drill. All of the commonly available fertilizer sources of phosphorus and potassium are acceptable for application to winter grains.

Nitrogren requirements of wheat and barley are also substantial. The actual amount of fertilizer nitro needed to meet this requirement will depend on the amount of nitrogen supplied by the soil. In Pennsylvania, this is largely influenced by the manure histsory of the field. Thus, nitrogen recommendations for small grains are mainly based on the manure history of the field as summarized in the following table:

Crop	Manure Every 1-2 yrs.	Manure Every 3-4 yrs.	Manure None recently
	----------N recommendation (lb/acre)----------
Wheat	0-30	30-60	60-90
Barley	0	0-30	30-40

Within a given manure history category, the actual rate selected will depend on the yield potential and the nitrogen history of the field. For higher expected yields use the higher end of the recommendation range. Use the lower end of the recommendation range where the previous manure or nitrogen fertilizer rates were high or where lodging has been a problem in the past. Remember that because of the potential for lodging do not apply excess nitrogen to small grains.

Only up to 15 pounds per acre of the nitrogen should be applied in the fall at planting time. The balance of the nitrogen should be applied in the spring. If the plants did not tiller well in the fall, the nitrogen should be applied by mid-March; otherwise, apply it anytime up to growth stage 5, which is the stage just before the stems start to elongate. The commonly available forms of nitrogen fertilizer are all acceptable for the winter grains.

Specialist Answers Questions

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Growers Corner is your opportunity to ask questions and share tips that lead to successful forage management.

Send your questions and/or tips to PFGC News, C/O Dr. Marvin Hall, Agronomy Dept. Penn State Univ., University Park, PA 16802. I'm counting on you readers to make this section of the news valuable to everyone. Send in those questions or tips!

Q. I've seen the term Relative Feed Value (RFV) in several farm magazines lately. The articles imply that RFV somehow is a measurement of hay quality. What is Relative Feed Valeu and how is it measured?

A. Relative Feed Value is an index which combines several important nutritional factors that are determined by forage analyses into one number for a quick, easy, and effective method of evaluating forage quality. Nutritive evaluation of forages involves a number of forage quality analyses including dry matter, crude protein, acid detergent fiber, neutral detergent fiber, calcium, and phosphorus. While these analyses are important in formulating diets, they are confusing when trying to quickly evaluate quality differences in hay or haylage. In several states producers are using RFV at hay auctions to compare hay lots prior to purchase. RFV is calculated by combining the digestibility (DDM) and potential intake (DMI) of a forage into one number [RFV=(DDM x DMI)/1.29]. The RFV number is only an index to use when comparing similar hay-lots (e.g. two different loads of alfalfa hay). The hay-lot with a higher RFV is of greater feed value relative to the other hay-lot with a lower RFV.

Joint SRM/AFGC Meeting In February

OMAHA, NEB. – Interest in forages, rangelands, and grasslands is the only requirement to join thousands of forage producers, educators and specialists Feb. 21-26 here at the joint conference of the Society for Range Management (SRM) and the American Forage and Grassland Council (AFGC).

These two international organizations are bringing together top forage and range management experts and producers from across North America. The conference, with its "Building on our Heritage" theme, promises to take a close look at the role forages and rangelands have played in North America and look forward to the future of these resources in the ever-changing world of agriculture.

The joint meeting represents a unique forum for an integrated presentation of range and forage topics through technical sessions, workshops and symposia, student events and competitions, tours, and a trade show. Concurrent technical sessions will include topics ranging from ecosystem management to forage evaluation and development of new forage crops.

Several day-long symposia will focus on such topics as anti-quality compounds in forages and management of juniper species. Half-day and full-day technical tours will highlight range and forage research conducted at the University of Nebraska and provide behind-the-scenes views of habitat management at a national wildlife refuge and a world-class zoo.

A special "companion" program will allow conference attendees to experience some of Omaha's many attractions, including Boys' Town, the Old Market, and Joslyn Art Museum.

PFGC ❖ SPECIAL REPORT ❖

USING ALFALFA-GRASS MIXTURES TO MINIMIZE DEER DAMAGE

M.H. Hall and R.C. Stoudt, Penn State Extension

Alfalfa is a prime feed source for both dairy cows and on-domesticated, white-tailed deer in Pennsylvania. Damage to alfalfa can be great. Numerous attempts have been made to deter deer from feeding on alfalfa and other crops but they have generally proven unsatisfactory because of high costs and/or ineffectiveness. Several researchers have reported that deer prefer alfalfa to forage grasses. However, the use of alfalfa-grass mixtures to deter deer from feeding on forage has been untested.

Study Description

Plots of alfalfa, timothy, orchardgrass, and alfalfa-timothy or orchardgrass mixtures in 3:1, 2:2, and 1:3 alfalfa to grass row arrangements were established within areas protected (with fencing) or unprotected from deer feeding. Forage from these plots was harvested three and four times in 1995 and 1996, respectively, and dry matter yield, percentage alfalfa and grass, and forage quality were determined. Economic evaluation of each treatment was made based on the value of the harvested forage and the differential costs associated with production.

Applied Questions

• To what extent do deer damage forages in central Pennsylvania? Forages protected from deer feeding averaged 1660 lb./acre more DM yield than their unprotected counterparts (Table 1). The greatest amount of deer feeding occurred in pure alfalfa and the least in pure orchardgrass. Forage quality was not affected by deer grazing. Weeds began to invade the plots in the second year of the study and were more severe in the unprotected than protected plots. Deer feeding resulted in average economic loss of $80 and $28/acre for pure alfalfa and pure orchardgrass, respectively.

• Do deer selectively graze one forage species over another? Deer selectively grazed alfalfa out of the alfalfa-grass mixtures and fed more on plots which contained timothy than those which contained orchardgrass. Averaged across all mixtures, alfalfa made up 35% of the total yield in the protected but only 19% in the unprotected mixed plots. Average yield reductions, as a result of deer feeding, were 1507 and 1102 lb./acre (excluding weed yield in 1996) for treatments containing timothy and orchardgrass, respectively (Table 1). Consequently, the economic losses associated with deer feeding were greater for mixtures containing more timothy than orchardgrass (Table 2).

• In a field where deer generally feed, are particular forage species mixtures better than others? In areas unprotected from deer feeding, pure orchardgrass and alfalfa-orchardgrass mixtures had greater total yields than pure alfalfa (Table 2). Weed infestation in second year of the study was greatest in pure alfalfa which had the greatest deer feeding and least in pure orchardgrass which had the least deer feeding in the first year of the study. Forage quality was not affected by deer feeding within the unprotected plots but was affected by the proportion of alfalfa to grass in the mixture. Alfalfa-orchardgrass mixtures had greater economic returns than pure alfalfa but only when alfalfa was seeded at ≥50% of the mixture (Table 2).

Recommendations

Deer feeding can greatly reduce forage yield. Deer selectively grazed alfalfa out of alfalfa-grass mixtures and showed a preference for timothy over orchardgrass. The use of orchardgrass alone or in a mixture with alfalfa reduces deer feeding and provides the greatest yields. However, when deer feeding occured, net economic returns were greater for alfalfa-orchardgrass mixtures because of improved quality compared to pure orchardgrass.

Executive Director In Leadership Conference

RIO GRANDE, OHIO – Richard Hann of Hershey, PA, recently joined 30 other forage leaders from across the United States at the American Forage and Grassland Council's (AFGC) Leadership Conference in southeastern Ohio.

The meeting provided a forum for sharing ideas on strengthening local forage programs and communicating the importance of forages in livestock production.

Conference sponsors including the American Forage and Grassland Council, the Forage and Grassland Foundation, The Ohio State University and Bob Evans Corporation. Highlights of the three day session included tours and discussion with Bob Evans about their grazing operation. Dr. Bobby Moser, vice president for agricultural administration and dean, College of Food, Agricultural and Environmental Sciences, The Ohio State University, provided a goal setting message and Martha Nall, Ed.D., University of Kentucky, shared tips on working with volunteers to get the job done.

The American Forage and Grassland Council (AFGC) is the voice of forage agriculture. AFGC, founded in 1944, is dedicated to the profitable production and sustainable utilization of quality forage and grasslands. AFGC has more than 5,000 members from the United States, Canada and Mexico.

Twenty-six states and provinces have organized local affiliate councils that plan and conduct programs to improve forage utilization and solve forage-related problems.

SPECIAL REPORT

HARVEST MANAGEMENT ALTERS ECONOMIC RETURN COOL-SEASON GRASSES

M.H. Hall, Penn State Extension

Cool-season grass use in Pennsylvania farming systems is increasing as farmers attempt to better manage and utilize nitrogen from manure. Harvest management recommendations for many cool-season grasses are generally based on research which monitored yield only. With forage quality being a major concern in balancing animal rations, livestock farmers are asking more about harvest management practices to manipulate forage quality and the economics of these practices.

The objectives of this study were to determine the effect of harvest frequency and number on forage yield and quality, and net economic return of cool-season forage grasses common to the northeastern United States.

Study Description

Established stands of orchardgrass, reed canarygrass, smooth bromegrass, and timothy at the Russell E. Larson Agric. Research Center near Rock Springs, PA were subjected to two (70-d interval), three (45-d interval), or four (35-d interval) harvests per year. Dry matter yield and forage quality were determined and economic evaluations of each treatment were made based on the value of the harvested forage and the differential costs associated with production.

Applied Questions

• Which harvest schedule produced the greatest DM yield/acre? In dry years, greatest DM yields for all species were obtained when 2 or 3 harvests/year were taken on a 70 or 45-d interval, respectively (Table 1). During the growing seasons with normal or above normal rainfall, greatest yields of smooth bromegrass and timothy were again achieved when harvested 2 or 3 times/year; however, yields or orchardgrass and reed canarygrass were greatest when harvested 3 or 4 times/year (Table 1).

• Which harvest schedule resulted in the highest quality forage? Regardless of rainfall during the growing season or grass species, forage quality improved and value of the forage increased from $49 to $81/ton as harvest interval decreased from 70 to 35 d, respectively.

• Which harvest treatment produced the greatest economic return/acre? In dry years, the number of harvests (harvest interval) made no difference in net economic return regardless of the grass species (Table 1). This response is logical because harvest schedules that produced the greatest yields also produced forage of the lowest quality, resulting in similar economic return for all harvest schedules.

In growing seasons when rainfall is normal or above normal, frequent harvests (35 or 45-d intervals) tended to result in the greatest net economic return per acre (Table 1). Frequent harvests also produced the highest quality forage but did not negatively impact forage yield as much as in dry years. An exception to this trend was for timothy where harvest frequency had no effect on economic return.

Recommendations

In the northeastern United States, cool-season grass harvest schedules must remain flexible and responsive to climatic conditions. In dry years, reduced yields associated with more frequent harvests of orchardgrass, reed canarygrass, smooth bromegrass and timothy were offset by improved forage quality so that net economic return per acre was unaffected. Therefore, under dry conditions, the level of forage quality required by the consuming animal should be used as guidelines for implementing a harvest schedule. Sufficient DM intake for high producing dairy animals would be impossible with the quality of forage obtained with 70-d harvest intervals. In years when rainfall is at or above normal, 35 to 45-d harvest intervals should be employed to maximize DM yield and forage quality.

Forage producers need to be able to plan a harvest strategy that will maximize net economic return without knowing what the growing season will be like. Consequently, producers who want high quality forage, should plan the first harvest as if four harvests will be taken on 35-d intervals. This means that in central Pennsylvania the first harvest should be taken about 20 May to ensure that a large portion of the grass forage for the season will be of high quality since a large portion of the total annual yield comes in the first harvest. The 35-d harvest interval could then be lengthened to 45d or more unless rainfall and grass growth are well above normal.

Table 1. The effect of number and frequency of harvests on the annual dry matter (DM) yield and net economic return from four perennial cool-season grasses under different environmental conditions.

Robert Chaapel, district sales manager for Seedway, center, talks about the many advantages of festulolium for intensive grazing.

New Hybrid Grass A Hit On Milton Farm

JUDY PATTON
Union Co. Correspondent

MILTON (Northumberland Co.) — to spread the word about a recently developed hybrid grass — festulolium — Penn State extension forage specialist Dave Hartman held a pasture walk in June at Max DeHart's farm near Milton.

Seedway district sales manager Robert Chaapel and farm manager Jack Smith provided information on festulolium to farmers who attended.

A cross between meadow fescue and perennial tetraploid ryegrass, Chaapel said the festulolium has become a top-seller in his 12-county district because of its many advantages, even though it is more expensive then orchardgrass. The intensive grazing mix using festulolium costs about $50 per acre to establish, whereas cheaper mixes run about $30 to $38. It is used more for grazing in a two- or three-year rotation cycle than for haying, Chaapel said.

Since festulolium was developed in northern Europe, where the climate is similar to Pennsylvania's, it holds up well over winter. Its deep root system makes it very adaptable to hilly ground with shallow topsoil common to this area. It has faster regrowth and a longer grazing season than perennial ryegrass even in dry periods, according to Seedway literature.

High palatability and nutritive value are also trademarks of festulolium. It maintains large leaves and small, soft stems even in the reproductive stage, which means that animals eat more of it and get more nutrients with less fiber. The two-year means yields average 5.62 tons of dry matter per acre with 27.9 percent ADF, 50 percent NDF, and 131.2 percent relative feed value (RFV).

Seedway's custom mix for the DeHart Farm included 30 percent festulolium, 20 percent orchardgrass, 17 percent Haygrazer alfalfa, 15 percent ryegrass, and 6 percent alsike clover. The recommended seeding rate in 25 pounds per acre. Seedway recommends using 150 pounds of nitrogen per acre per year for fertilizer, 30 percent applied in the spring and the rest evenly split after each harvesting. It is also recommended to pasture when the plants are six inches high until they are three inches and to mow or graze when the plants are in the leafy and vegetative stage.

Jack Smith seeded the festulolium mix with a grain drill in the four and a half acre demonstration pasture in the spring of 1997. He said that field was bare after using it as a calving area over winter, pasturing their Angus cows on orchardgrass. The festulolium mix "popped immediately" and was easily established, Smitih said.

Instead of chemical fertilizer, Smith uses chicken litter and cow manure. He spreads about two tons of chicken litter per acre every other year, composting the litter before spreading to increase the nutrient value. He believes it is best to apply the litter in the fall to maximize the nitrogen intake during a rainier period. The litter costs around $8 per ton delivered, and Smith rents a litter spreader to apply it. He also spreads lime on the pasture as needed according to soil tests.

For weed control, Smith clips the pasture after it has been grazed. Because the animals like the festulolium so much, he said the pasture had been grazed uniformly without picking out the legumes as they usually do. Hartman said that Crossbow was the least expense perennial herbicide spray which is effective and that Ally was also suitable to use for weed control.

At the time of the pasture walk, Smith had grazed 120 cows on the pasture two weeks before for three days when the plants were a foot high. He said the field looked as though it had been plowed after the grazing, but in spite of having no rain for three weeks, the festulolium was coming back quickly.

Max DeHart, who has a candy and tobacco distributorship in Milton, has about 600 ewes and 130 registered Angus cows on his farm, which he has operated since 1985. Smith pastures the mature sheep and mature Angus together at times, which he says helps produce more uniform grazing. If the animals have lambs or calves, he pastures the cows separately first, then the sheep.

Farm Plan. A Service of FPC Financial

DUANE E. PYSHER
Grassland Management Specialist
Natural Resources Conservation Service

I just finished reviewing the list of Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council's Outstanding Pasture Producer Award winner from past years. What is it that makes a pasture producer outstanding?

The word "outstanding" is defined by Webster as the "act of standing out". That does not mean "standing out" as in your fields or pastures, but is to be "conspicuous". In my definition, it means the grazier who does everything right plus a little more. It is the "little mores" that makes that difference.

The "little mores" refer to such things as paying attention to the needs of the forages while effectively meeting the feed demands of the grazing livestock, preventing overgrazing, keeping plant density at optimum, maintaining fertility levels, keeping good records, maximizing profits, extending the grazing season, and filling in the voids.

Now what do all of these things mean? Or how do I accomplish all of these? you may ask.

When a grazier is as concerned about the needs of the forage as they are the livestock, then the system is on the right track. It is most important that livestock perform to the optimum and return the most animal products (milk, meat, and wool) as possible.

The forages also have their needs. If they are consistently going to produce forages that allow our livestock to make maximum production, then we as producers must take care of those needs.

The needs refer to rest periods between grazings, stubble heights after grazing, optimum grazing heights for turn-in, and so on. It means that the grazier must be going out to look at what the forages are doing and planning the system around those observations. These observations are not to just monitor where tomorrow's forages are, but also those for two weeks down the road.

The prevention of overgrazing is critical in maintaining the persistence of the stand. Proper rest periods need to be maintained between grazings. These vary from species or with the time of year. The stubble height left after grazing must be high enough to ensure an adequate reserve of energy for the regrowth of the plant.

The rest period is important so that the energy reserve level is able to be replenished before grazing occurs again.

Another consideration in overgrazing is the length of time that livestock have access to a pasture or paddock. This period should be three days or less. After three days, the plants are starting to regrow and grazing will remove this new growth before the energy reserves are replenished. This reduces the persistence of the stand and, if it continues, will kill the stand. If you limit the amount of land available to grazing, you can reduce the amount of spot grazing that occurs when livestock have too much forage available.

Plant density is another factor that needs attention, for several reasons. The number of plants per square foot, or other land unit, needs to be high so as much sunlight as possible is intercepted and converted into green plant tissue or energy. This increased forage output and should also provide for maximum livestock output per acre. It also means that there will be a good canopy of leaves over the soil to prevent erosion. By not having open area in the grass cover, weeds will not establish easily because the forages are competing for and utilizing the sunlight and nutrients that the weeds need for growth.

If you want to asses your pastures, be sure that when you are looking at them, you are looking straight down, Looking out over a stand always makes it look thick. Therefore, by looking straight down you eliminate this illusion. If you feel your stands are thin and you see more bare earth than you should, you need to consider strengthening the stands with no-till for grasses and perhaps frost-seeding for legumes. There are other methods of establishment. You need to use whatever works for you. What is important is that you get the stand density increased to make better pastures.

Maintaining or building up fertility levels is key in establishing and maintaining good productive pastures. The use of soil tests to bring field conditions to proper levels is highly recommended when you establish pastures. Retesting every 3 to 5 years will ensure that your levels are being maintained. Top dressing every year is recommended, especially for nitrogen if you do not have at least 30 percent legumes in your stands to provide the nitrogen source.

To extend the grazing season, either earlier in the spring and/or later into the fall and even winter months, you need to consider what forages or crop residues are available at that time and plan to utilize them. This is possible by having a perimeter fencing system around your whole farm which allows you to take advantage of being able to graze crop residues or fall-seeded small grains. You can even fill in those summer slump months with other forages to graze, such as brassicas or annual warm season grasses.

Items To Consider In The Development Of A Grazier Network

HARRISBURG — These considerations are general in nature and are intended to help graziers who are interested in developing a network of graziers.

1 The group initially should develop a purpose and goals or operating procedures.

2. Elect officers or select a coordinating committee.

3. Organize as an independent group and invite public agency personnel to meet with the group as the need arises or as an advisor.

4. Select a format for meeting (open discussion or formal presentation).

5. Stress honesty within membership (share the good and the bad). A key to the success of the group will be in learning from each other.

6. Establish a list of topics for meetings if format is other than open discussion groups.

7. Adopt meeting dates (suggest set time and day, such as the second Tuesday of each month at 10 a.m.).

8 Select meeting location(s). If they are to be pasture walks, select hosts

9 Develop method for mailing notices of upcoming meetings or walks Who will do it, how will the cost of postage and copying be paid for?

a Maintain mailing list confidentiality It should be used only by responsible person within the group for mailing meeting notices or other group mailings.

10. Open discussion pasture walks need to have a coordinator (not host) to:

a Watch clock

b. Watch group and keep them together.

c. Be the leader.

d. Watch group so they keep focused on pasture walk.

e. ask questions (of host and audience) to spur discussions.

f. If industry personnel are present do not allow sales promotions.

g. Make sure discussion is conducted in pasture not at barn.

11. Maintain proper lines of communication with local agency personnel when involving state staff specialists in local meetings. Keep local agencies involved with group but do not rely on them to organize and conduct meetings.

12. If refreshments are to be part of the meeting make sure that someone is responsible for each meeting.

PFGC Hay Show Attracts Attention

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — This year, 131 hay samples were entered in the PFGC Hay Show at Ag Progress Days.

This was an increase in sample numbers compared with the last several years. Not only were there more samples in the show, but the quality of the samples was similar to those of past years when conditions were better for making quality hay.

The visual appearance of most samples was excellent. The quality analysis is average across all samples was crude protein = 18 percent; acid detergent fiber (ADF) = 34 percent; neutral detergent fiber (NDF) = 53 percent; and relative feed value (calculated from ADF and NDF = 110.

The relative feed value was one point greater than last year. Numerous exhibitors and visitors at the Hay Show commented on the green and leafy appearance of many samples. A common comment heard around the hay was "How did they make this stuff?"

The champion in the "field cured" and division was Robert Oswald from Nazareth, with an entry of later cutting alfalfa. The champion in the heat-dried division was again Robert Bieber also from Nazareth, with an entry of pure alfalfa. Bieber has been the champion in this division for seven consecutive years. Don Myers, Spring Mills, was the champion in the "preservatives added" division with a later cutting of pure alfalfa.

Where Do Weeds Originate?

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — Ever wonder where some of the weeds that you try to control originated from? Listed below are some grasses and broadleaves and their country of origin.

- South America - pigweed
- Asia - Indian mustard, velvetleaf
- Africa - witchweed
- China - foxtail
- United States - ragweed, marestail, nightshade, and sunflower
- Europe - quackgrass, bindweed, wild mustard, sowthistle, and johnsongrass.

What does weed control or crop loss related to weeds really cost in the U.S.?

- $4.1 billion annual loss in agronomic crops because of weed pressure.
- $20 billion loss in crop yields if no weed control was taken.
- $4+ billion spent on herbicide control of weeds.
- $3 billion spent on alternative control methods.

Do weeds actually have any positive benefits? They:

- Help stabilize soil.
- Provide nectar for bees.
- Improve soil tilth.
- Provide employment opportunities.
- Are used for human consumption.
- Provide habitat for wildlife.
- Serve as a genetic reservoir.

FORAGE MANAGEMENT TIPS

This spring and summer, as you are making haylage and hay, keep in mind some basic management principles of good forage making.

First of all, proper maturity counts. In fact, it is likely the most important part of a good forage program.

Second, check dry matter. If it is haylage, we know that there are specific moisture ranges that encourage good packing and fermentation. If we go too wet, which is less than 30 percent dry matter, or too dry, greater than 60 percent dry matter, we drastically increase the likelihood of a poor fermentation.

High quality silage requires a proper fermentation to promote good intakes and high levels of milk production. The only way to know the dry matter of haylage is to measure it.

Use a microwave, oven or koster tester – but you must measure the first load and check it periodically. If you are good at squeezing a handful to monitor moisture, then calibrate your handful with a few measured analyses in the microwave as very few people can retain their hand squeezing calibration over the winter or from cutting to cutting. Recalibrate yourself often.

A next point for haylage is to check particle size as you chop it. Nothing you do to haylage after harvest increases the particle size – everything reduces particle size post harvest. Silo filling, silo unloading, TMR mixers, and feed delivery systems all reduce particle size of forage.

some systems are minimal in their effects and some are great. If moisture ranges are monitored for haylage, it is strongly suggested to try to achieve the shortest particle length possible that will fit with your storage and feeding systems. For upright silos, you are more limited than with bunker silos in terms of acceptable length. Bunker silos still have to have proper moisture in order to pack longer material. Never compromise a good fermentation with too long a particle size. The problems of poor packing and moldy, poorly fermented haylage will far outweigh any increases that you may gain from longer haylage particle size.

If maturity and moisture of the crops are in the proper ranges, then getting your cow's physical effective fiber from grass or legume forages in the form of haycrop silage, balage, and hay will usually beat the physical fiber achieved from corn silage. There are often more problem with fermentation and fiber digestibility from long chopped corn silage supplying physically effective fiber for your cows, than if that long fiber comes from a haycrop source.

Here Are Guidelines To Alfalfa Replanting

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — There have been several questions regarding replanting alfalfa stands. Because of last year's drought, some alfalfa stands that were established last spring did not grow well and are rather thin.

Here are four points to consider if you are thinking about no-tilling some alfalfa seed into established stands.

1. Established alfalfa produces a toxin that will reduce germination and slow seedling growth of new alfalfa plants. This is known as autotoxicity.

2. Using a no-till drill to replant will cause damage to the established plants in the crown region, making them more susceptible to disease.

3. If the new seedlings germinate and emerge, they will be shaded out by the older, established plants. The older plants will treat the new seedlings as weeds.

4. Research has shown that replanting into an established stand is not economically beneficial.

So what should you do with a first-year stand that is thin? You may consider broadcasting some grass seed and allowing the stand to develop into a mixed or mostly grass stand. The other option would be to plant corn once the first cutting has been removed.

For new seedings, planting depth is .25-.5 inches deep and and should be planted before April 30. Seedling rate is recommended at 12- to 15-pounds per acre. You may want to increase the rate on cool, damp soils to 18 pounds. If using a companion crop, such as oats, they should be seeded at 1.5 bushels per acre.

Grazing Conservation Coalition Elects Officers

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) – The Pennsylvania Grazing Lands-Forage Conservation Coalition conducted its first meeting at the Farm Bureau Building in August and elected officers.

The Pennsylvania Grazing Lands-Forage Conservation Coalition is a grass-roots, producer-driven effort with representation on the board of Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council, Pennsylvania Dairy Association, Pennsylvania Holstein Association, Pennsylvania Livestock Association, Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association, Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts, Pennsyl-vania Sheep and Wool Grower's Association, Pennsylvania RC&D Area Representatives and Pennsylvania State Grange.

The Pennsylvania Grazing Lands-Forage Conservation Coalition is a grass-roots effort to enhance technical assistance available to owners of private grazing lands. In addition, the coalition works to increase public awareness of the importance pasturelands have in food production, people's health, and the conservation of our national resources.

Driving the Pennsylvania Grazing Lands-Forage Conservation Coalition is a collective of private grazing land owners and managers participating with several conservation, environmental, scientific, and producer organizations.

The voluntary program assists private landowners, identifies priority issues, and finds solutions to improve grazing lands.

The chairman of The National Steering Committee Grazing lands, Bob Drake, Oklahoma, and Director Gary Westmoreland, Texas, were present to help draft Pennsylvania's Grazing Lands Coalition By-laws. Officers were elected. They are chairman Jim Henry, Cattlemen's Association, Clarion County; vice chair John Courtney, Wool Grower's Association, Mercer County; vice chairman of communications, Candace Burke, Penn's Corner RC&D, Armstrong County; treasurer, Elrose Glick, Mid-States RC&D, Mifflin County.

Coalition Stages First Field

After lunch the tour of Bob Hockenberry's Project Grass Rotational Grazing Beef Farm was under way in northern Huntington with coordinator J.B. Harold.

Speaker on the farm tour was Dr. Matt Sanderson USDA/ARS.

Dr. Marvin Hall, Penn State Agtonomy-Crop Science Culture and Utilization of Forage Crops specialist, lectured on Selecting Pasture.

Ag Crisis Conference Brings Government, Farmers Together

ABERNATHY, Texas — Everyone's talking about the weather this year, and, as usual, no one can really do anything about it.

But this summer, farmers and others in the agricultural Community came together to discuss ways to cope with the drought that has stricken a large part of the crop production area in the United States.

The Ag Crisis Conference was held in Oklahoma City recently to provide a forum to discuss problems caused by the weather and to develop a plan of action.

The conference brought in governors from four of the affected states, the state commissioners of agriculture from several states, as well as representatives from farm organizations from 17 states.

Representing sorghum growers at the conference were NGSP directors Dale Artho, Ken Rose and Kenny Tevis and NGSP executive director, Tim Lust.

Tevi, NGSP president, said the conference was a way to get the word out about the drought and its effect on the agricultural economy.

The conference served two purposes, he said. It helped increase awareness of the different problems faced by different groups, and it gave the governors and commissioners a chance to develop a list of issues that will be forwarded to Washington for action.

The 34th National Apple Harvest Festival held in the heart of apple country offered something for everybody during the first two weekends in October.

Apple Ideas Abound At Festival

GINNY WILT
Adams Co. Correspondent

ARENDTSVILLE (Adams Co.) — Walking through the National Apple Harvest Festival smelling its wonderfully pungent odors of cooking apples and spices in an assortment of dishes triggers a desire for food.

It is apparent that you are not alone, because everywhere you look people sit at tables or walk the midway eating products from the many vendors on hand to pay homage to the apple, Adams County's top crop.

At Pippins Apple Stew stand, sponsored by Preferred Catering Services of Gettysburg, the four owners who also work at Gettysburg College, busily prepare a pot of Cider Beef Stew.

While the catering service has had a stand at the festival in the past, it never before served the unique beef stew.

Chris Rinehart, along with his partners, Ed Earp, Jason Stoots, and Dean Anthony, said he found the recipe for the stew "in an old country cookbook."

The four men have 50 years of combine food service experience and are certified chefs with training from Hotel Hershey and Gettysburg College.

In their new festival offering some modern-day touches such as A-1 Sauce were added to the recipe, Rinehart said. While the recipe is a secret, he did say that "you use cider instead of beef stock, and green beans instead of peas to make a sweet and tangy stew. People ask a lot of questions about it." Sirloin cubes are also used.

Amazing ways to use apples in cooking were available for tasting during the National Apple Harvest Festival. Stew made with cider instead of beef broth, apple pizza, and apple sausage were a few of the novel apple dishes.

Samples were available at the stand and Rinehart added, "People who try it, like it."

Sitting on the scooter he uses because multiple sclerosis has taken its toll, Don Hershey of Mount Joy, Lancaster County, teases about his popular creation Apple Sausage.

Gooseberry Farm Specializes In Herbs

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

BEDFORD (Bedford Co.) — As a little girl, Joan Howsare of Bedford remembers following her grandmother as she planted and weeded her lush flower gardens

"Grandma would just get in there and tackle those weeds," Joan recalls fondly. "I guess the love of plants just got into my blood."

Joan is an owner of the attractive Gooseberry Farms located along Wareham Road, just off Route 30.

Gooseberry specializes in herbs, both culinary and decorative.

The "Gooseberry" name came to Joan when she was trying to think of something "attention getting."

"Of course, I had to plant some gooseberry bushes to go along with the name," she explains. The gooseberries make a particularly good jelly." As an avid gardener, Joan's interest in herbs began years prior to starting her own business

"I found I was always driving to Gettysburg or some other distant place to find herb plants," she says. "I thought if I was doing that, others must be doing the same thing."

Gooseberry Farms encompases live and dried plants. Surplus items are sold at the Fall Foliage Festival held the first two weekends in October in Bedford The festival continues to bring business long after the last leaves of autumn have fallen. "People pick up my card at the festival and contact me year round," points out Joan.

During the spring of 1998, Gooseberry was a part of a mystery bus tour from Altoona which also brought in customers.

Work for the herb garden begins while the cold winds of winter are still howling. Seeds are planted and begun under grow lights. "The first couple of years, I had plants everywhere," she remembers. "But, I'm more organized now and have gotten my system under control."

She adds that "grow lights" are the secret to successfully growing plants from seeds.

When the seedling plants are big enough, they are transferred to the greenhouse which is a part of Gooseberry.

All of the herbs are grown naturally with no pesticides or chemical fertilizers. "If the deer or rabbits want to eat some of them, I just let them have their share," Joan says.

The heavy scents of the herbs deter the wild animals during the summer months. However, in the winter, they will nibble the plants down to the ground. "It saves me a lot of cutting and is good for the plants," laughs Joan.

The shop at Gooseberry is an old summer kitchen which was moved from its original location behind the farm house to its present spot on the sunny lawn.

Culinary herbs include basil, thyme, oregano, savory, bay leaves, French tarragon, rosemary, parsley and marjoram.

Joan working at her Fall Foliage Stand in Bedford.

Decorative herbs which come in a wide array of vivid and pastel colors are, lavendar, germander, hyssop, statice, and borage. Borage can be eaten and is quite tasty when candied but also jazzes up a summer party when frozen in ice cubes.

Joan grows an array of ornamental grasses and such interesting herbs as tansy and lamb's ear.

Gooseberry usually opens in May and closes in the middle of August. This year, due to the dry weather, Joan decided to close earlier. Shop hours when open are 9:30 a.m. until 5 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

At other times, Joan can be contacted via an answering machine at the shop. Or, you might just find her there on off hours, transplanting plants or digging in the dirt. It's where she is the happiest.

Gooseberry is an attractive spot during the summer.

Selling the sausage sandwiches benefits the Muscular Sclerosis Society.

Hershey first teases about the secrecy of his recipe, but relents and states that he uses a pork-beef mixture — more pork than beef — and adds applesauce and apple chunks, along with apple juice and cinnamon.

At the Biglerville Boy Scout Troop's stand, Scoutmaster Done Hockenberry is busy putting meat for his group's Apple Pizzas into an oven.

Hockenberry notes that the troop has been making the pizza for eight years.

The first year we started with a pie crust and apple pie filling to which we added seasonings and apple juice. We should've patented it because the very next year Musselman's (the fruit packer) started to make it. Now everytime I see a can of it I think, 'that is ours,'" the Scoutmaster with 44 years in the Scout field, said.

Proceeds from the festival will help defray the expenses of sending some youngsters to camp and others on a trip to the West next summer.

Since many of the boys in the troop have a Native American heritage they have also established the Red Creek Native American Dancers and will be the host on Feb. 13 at a mid-winter Native American festival.

Upper Adams Jaycees, sponsors of the event, have stands where not only fresh apples are sold, but one can find apple jelly and syrup along with pancakes.

There Bermudian Jaycees stand is also a popular place. Here you can find Apple Fritters made fresh while you wait. In this group's second stand there are more apple dumplings, pies, doughnuts, and turnovers.

A line that seems to never end winds its way through the inside of the stand to pick up dumplings and ice cream to eat on the spot. At the front of the stand volunteers, sell packaged apple treats.

This group is not shy about releasing its apple fritter recipe. It is posted in large letters on a sign at the stand where they are made. Here is the recipe.

During the Apple Harvest Festival, Sara Myers, 9, of Wenksville, and John Wenk, president of the Adams County Fruit Growers Association, wait on visitors at the fruitgrowers' restaurant.

APPLE FRITTER
Bermudian Jaycees

1 cup flour
1-1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup granulated sugar

1 egg
5 medium apples, diced

Combine all ingredients except apples. Then stir in apples and drop by spoonfuls into hot oil, frying 5 minutes on each side.

Also available is the "Adams County Apple Cookbook" published by The Upper Adams Jaycees. At $5 a copy it is a popular souvenir from the festival and can be purchased by calling 1-717-677-9413.

The following recipes are taken from the Apple Cookbook.

GINNY WILT
Adams Co. Correspondent

ARENDTSVILLE (Adams Co.) — Even though the apple didn't put on its best show this year — and the weather had trouble cooperating — the 34th annual National Apple Harvest Festival paid homage to Adams County's main fruit.

John Wenk, president of the Adams County Fruitgrowers Association, said, "Countywide it was a short crop. It was a difficult year because of the weather. Everything was two weeks early."

Wenk, who with his brother, Dave Wenk, operated Three Spring Fruit Farm, explained that while the fruit came in early in some cases it didn't develop its color at the right time.

"Timing was a problem. Some varieties were ready, while others were not" creating a crisis for some farmers who harvested only 10 to 20 percent of their crop, he said.

Because the fruit-growing business is a year-to-year proposition, and since there is not the profit in it as there once was, Wenk said, "Some farmers will undoubtedly have trouble getting through this year, let alone starting next year."

He noted that the juice market is depressed because of China's move into the concentrate arena.

"China production (of apples has surpassed the United states and they haven't reached their capacity. We went over and showed them how to do it and they liked the idea. Now they're just getting started in the fresh market. I don't know if I'd recommend any of my three kids to get into the business," the 35-year-old farmer said.

While Washington State sells to the Orient, he said, he thinks that market will dry up too.

And, another hardship for the orchard owners results from the federal government's crackdown on illegal immigrants, making it difficult to hire workers to pick the crops, he said.

"Today most farmers in the 45 and younger age group have wives who work away from home. In my father's generation up to 98 percent of the wives didn't work off the farm," Wenk said.

Wenk helped out at the fruitgrowers' restaurant at the festival.

The festival was originally started by the fruitgrowers, but because it fell at the same time as the apple harvest it became difficult for them to maintain. They asked the Upper Adams Jaycees if they'd like to sponsor the event, according to Judy Behney, Upper Adams vice president.

They did, and, she explained, today 50 percent of the proceeds the Upper Adams Jaycees earn is used to support and improve Oakside Community Park in Biglerville.

The Jaycees first purchased 53 acres of land for the park in 1975 and recently added 15 acres to it for expansion of recreational facilities.

Today the park includes four ballfields, three soccer fields, 16 volleyball courts, a basketball court, concession stand, two ponds — one for fishing and one for skating — an amphitheater with new lighting, playground equipment and picnic pavilions.

The master plan calls for a community center, swimming pool and tennis courts yet to be built.

In addition many other Adams County Jaycee organizations sell foods at the festival with the money they earn returned to their respective communities.

The festival also draws several hundred craft vendors.

APPLE RED CABBAGE SOUP

1 small head red cabbage, shredded salt and pepper
2 tablespoons lard
1/2 cup tarragon vinegar
3 cups beef stock
1/2 cup red wine
2 tbsp. sugar
3 medium tart apples, cored and sliced
1/3 cup currant jelly
1/2 teaspoon cloves
1/2 teaspoon caraway seed

It is important to cook this soup in an enamel or earthenware pot or the red cabbage will turn an unappetizing violet color!

Sprinkle the shredded cabbage with salt and pepper. Melt the lard in a large enamel pan Add the cabbage and sprinkle it with the vinegar and stir over low heat with a wooden spoon for a few minutes. Add the beef stock and wine and summer while you put the sugar in a small pan with 2 tablespoons of water and cook until brown or caramelized

Add this to the cabbage and cover to simmer for 1-1/2 hours. Then add the apples, jelly, caraway seed, and cloves and simmer for 20 minutes more.

APPLE PEANUT BUTTER SPREAD

Mix 1/2 cup finely chopped unpeeled apple with 1 cup peanut butter (smooth or crunchy) and 1/3 cup crumbled crisp bacon You can thin mixture with a little honey if you wish Makes great sandwiches for kids.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD CABBAGE SALAD

1/3 cup diced onion
1/4 cup molasses

Brush top with a glaze made of equal parts of molasses and ketchup (1/4 cup each). Bake 15 minutes more.

You may also use pork or a combination of pork and veal instead of beef.

1/4 teaspoon salt

It was a good year here. For corn.

It was a good year here. For soybeans.

It was a good year here. For tomatoes. Well, once they finally got growing.

It was not a good year here. For pumpkins.

We are truly grateful for this year's crops, because it was not a good year for farmers in many parts of the country, some of them not very far away. Corn, along with hay, is the backbone of our year's supply of cattle feed. Soybeans are both feed and sales crop. But both grain crops are of vital economic importance to our business plan.

The bumper crop of tomatoes, though they were frustratingly slow to ripen, have filled the jar shelf in the basement with ample supplies of material for soups, spaghetti, chili, plus a nice stockpile of salsa ready to open and dip into. Our 30 or so tomato plants fed us and friends for the past several weeks and we treasure each fresh, delicious one from the dwindling stockpile left after a couple of light frosts.

While the garden tomato crop plays no significant role in our farm business, the end results still mean several less items on the ever-present, grocery-shopping list. And food on the shelf is worth something in economic value.

Pumpkins offer a different story. Two years ago, we harvested about a quarter-ton of pumpkins from the small section of pumpkin patch between the old and new dairy barns. Last year's sparse planting was promptly—within hours—trampled to oblivion by escaped heifers.

Good thing that pumpkins don't factor into our farm business plan because this year's pumpkin yield is on the meager side. And that's apparently the story around the region, not good new for produce farmers who do factor pumpkins into their sales numbers. While there's a pumpkin harvest out there, as evidenced by lovely displays at area farm markets, there doesn't seem to be the abundance or size of some seasons. Too long wet in the spring, too long chilly in early summer, too long hot and dry in August and September.

Jack-o-lanterns will probably be a little more pricey this season, in response to that basic economic law of supply and demand.

Some of the more aggressive vines in our little patch had recently begun poking fingers of inquisitive growth up outside the wall and in through the open windows of the dairy barn, until cooler weather slowed their enthusiasm. Usually, the planting is a mix of a few of the round, decorative, jack-o-lantern types, and more of the pie-pumpkin varieties. Not one of the pie types grew this time, not a problem since the freezer still holds some leftover from other seasons.

None are the giants of some years. The dozen or so are medium to small, with oodles of green ones, which will never get close to ripening before a killer frost fixes them.

So I've picked a few each day and hauled them onto the front porch with some mature-orange summer squash, bumpy-textured volunteer gourds from the brush pile and a couple of Jack-Be-Little gourds from the garden patch. Midnight, the porch cat, curls up nearby on the rug for a snooze, adding the perfect black-cat touch for a seasonal display.

While our farm business does not depend on pumpkins, they do offer a valuable return.

Pumpkins make people smile. Just watch a little kid in a pumpkin patch. These orange orbs are symbolic of the harvest, and bounty, and all the warm-fuzzy, fun-feelings that go with the season of dressing up and getting treats (Make mine chocolate, please.)

Our meager pumpkin harvest may not amount to much, economics-wise. But the grins they generate when your share them with kids are priceless.

So while international monetary interests and world stock markets continue to gyrate, pumpkins at least guarantee us a solid return in that "mutual fun" investments.

Don't Squash These Recipes

Pumpkins and their cousins, winter squash, are two of Pennsylvania's major vegetable crops.

Growers in many areas are not expecting a bumper crop because of the dry weather. But with the 4,500 acres planted, consumers should have plenty of pumpkins to select from when shopping at farm markets, garden centers, and supermarkets.

Choosing a pumpkin is mostly a matter of taste. Many people prefer winter squash varieties for eating purposes. Although the large jack-o'-lantern-type pumpkin can be cooked for pies or other recipes, their flesh is stringy and eating quality poor compared to the smaller pie-type pumpkins, often called sugar pumpkins because of their sweetness.

Neck pumpkins, which are really squash, make tasty pumpkin dishes for pumpkin pie or bread.

Pumpkin or squash can be cooked in a number of different ways. After splitting the pumpkin or squash, remove the seeds and attached strings, the flesh can be cut out of the rind and cubed. The cubed flesh can be boiled, steamed, or microwaved until tender and then mashed.

For the smaller squash varieties, the fruit can be cut in half. After scooping out the seeds, the halves should be placed cut-side up in a shallow pan with a small amount of water or simply on a baking sheet, covered with foil, and baked in a hot oven until the flesh is tender. The halves can also be partially covered and cooked in a microwave oven until tender. The cooked flesh can be scooped out and mashed for use in recipes or a little butter and brown sugar can be placed on top of the halved squash during the baking process and the squash serves as is.

Pumpkin and squash are both good sources of vitamin A although squash has more than pumpkin (and can usually be substituted for pumpkin in recipes). They also have good amounts of fiber and help fulfill the recommended three to five servings of vegetables per day recommended by nutrition experts.

Here are some delicious ways to enjoy pumpkin and squash.

A sure sign of fall is the appearance of bright orange pumpkins and squashes in all shades of colors and different shapes.

Although new varieties of squash and pumpkin keep cropping up, most varieties are interchangeable in recipes.

AUTUMN CHICKEN AND RICE STUFFED SQUASH

12 boneless, skinless, chicken tenderloins
1 box long grain and wild rice
3 small acorn squash
2 teaspoons grated orange rind
2 tablespoons butter
½ cup sliced celery
½ cup dried cranberries
¼ cup orange juice

Heat oven to 350. Cut squash in half lengthwise, remove seeds. Place cut side down in lightly greased 15x10x1-inch pan. Bake 30 minutes. Prepare rice according to package directions, stir in orange rind. Set aside. Rinse fresh chicken under cold water and pat dry. Cut into 1-inch pieces.

In large skillet, melt butter; add celery and chicken. Cook 1 to 2 minutes until chicken is browned and juices run clear. Combine chicken mixture, cooked rice and dried cranberries in medium bowl; mix well. Spoon chicken and rice mixture into partially cooked squash halves. Drizzle with orange juice. Return to oven and bake 25 to 35 minutes, or until squash is tender when pierced with a fork.

Protect Blueberries Over The Winter

Mulching blueberries in the fall is one of the easiest ways to prevent healthy plants from sever winter injury, dieback, and poor yields. Mulch actually improves the root system of the plants, improve the winter survival of plants and increase plant height and fruit yields the following year.

On cold and still fall nights when radiant frost occurs, heavy cold air drains into lower field blueberry plantings and may cause injury to some plants. For this reason, avoid pruning blueberries in the fall. Prune instead in the early Spring.

But, why protect blueberry plants now? Often, parts of Pennsylvania have little snow cover. Low temperatures and little snow cover creates the worst possible conditions for the newly-planted and established blueberries. A cold snap in the fall can be especially deadly to weakened plants by killing dormant flower buds.

Mulches are considered essential for winter production especially on sandy loam and droughty soils. A reliable thermometer that registers current and minimum temperatures can help predict the extent of winter injury.

Winter protection studies have looked at the hardiness of each blueberry variety. These studies have found each variety's winter hardiness is dependent on how the plants go into and come out of winter dormancy. A cold snap in the fall could be deadly especially if it occurs early in the season. Also, plants going into dormancy with a moist soil environment are less likely to be injured.

Some highbush varieties are more winter hard than others. Several hardy varieties are listed in the Commercial Pennsylvania Small Fruit Production and Pest Management Guide available at the Extension office. They include bluecrop, bluegold, bluejay, blueray, duke, elizabeth, elliott, herbert, jersey, lateblue, nelson, patriot and spartan.

Mulches work as insulators. Even snow makes an excellent mulch. A mulch restricts heat in the soil from moving up around the plant. For example, when the air temperature was -35° F in a Minnesota study, it was -11° under 6 inches of snow.

If waiting for snow seems too risky, try a 1/8th-inch plastic mulch, row cover materials, rye straw, oak leaves, chopped corn stalks, oak sawdust or peat moss. Each type of mulch has its advantages and disadvantages. Each provide some protection against winter's worst weather.

At least 4 to 6 inches of organic matter is recommended. Replenish the mulch each year to keep the mulch depth at 2 to 4 inches. Other mulches used by gardeners include buckwheat hulls, shredded and composted leaves, wood chips, ground corn cobs, grass clippings, coco hulls and salthay. The two best are rotted sawdust and composted hardwood bark.

A leaf mulch of oak, locust, beech, maple, sycamore and even pine needles have worked well as mulches. But, replenishing the mulch cover has to occur each year. Even composted manure or stable bedding has been looked at as mulching material.

Avoid grass clipping from areas previously treated with herbicide. Burlap is not a good idea. Also, avoid fresh grass clippings that will overheat and ferment. Be careful using peat moss, legume hay, straw, and mushroom soil. For example, mushroom soil may raise the pH of the soil. Other mulches crust on the surface. This reduces water penetrating to the roots of blueberries.

Some materials work better than others with young plantings. Straw helps to catch snow on younger plantings but is difficult to remove in the Spring. Leaves are time consuming to apply and remove For example 2-1/2 bags of leaves is needed to cover a relatively small number of plants.

For all the organic mulches, 1 to 2 year old mulching materials are preferred. Materials like aged or fresh pine bark or peat moss are easily incorporated prior to planting blueberries each Spring.

Cook's Question

ANSWER — A Shippensburg reader wanted a recipe for making cottage cheese that is soft and creamy like the store-bought variety. Thanks to Fran Westfall for sending a recipe.

Cottage Cheese

In a 2-quart stainless steel saucepan, beat 1 quart whole milk until tiny bubbles form around the edge.

Add ¼ cup lemon juice and simmer 2 minutes. Do not stir. Remove from heat and let stand in pan at least 45 minutes.

Line colander or bowl with cheese cloth. Pour cooled milk mixture into the cloth. Hang cloth and let whey drop for one hour.

Remove cottage cheese from cloth, into a bowl, and stir in ⅛ teaspoon salt and ¼ cup milk.

Cover and refrigerate until chilled.

ANSWER — Robina Watson, Blackwood, N.J., requested recipes for sugarless muffins for a diabetic. Thanks to Erla Shirk, Ephrata, for sending a recipe.

Diabetic Banana Muffins

2 cups flour (sift)
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon baking soda
⅓ cup cooking oil
½ teaspoon nutmeg
1 egg, slightly beaten
1 cup ripe banana, mashed
⅓ cup skim milk
2 teaspoons Sweet-10

Grease and flour baking dish or use paper baking cups. Sift flour with baking powder, salt, soda, and nutmeg into a mixing bowl. Combine remaining ingredients. Mix with dry ingredients until dry particles are moistened. Fill muffin cups two-thirds full and bake at 375 degrees for 20-25 minutes. Makes 12 muffins.

ANSWER — Donna Beyerbach, Oakdale, wanted a recipe for zucchini cake that is canned in a jar. Thanks to Pat Chance, Clayton, Del., who writes that her family published a cookbook in which this recipe was included.

Cake In A Jar

3 eggs
1 cup oil
2 cups sugar
3 cups flour
3 teaspoons vanilla
3 teaspoons cinnamon
2 cups zucchini, grated
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon baking powder
½ cup chopped nuts
½ cup raisins (optional)

Beat eggs until light and fluffy. Add vanilla, oil, sugar, and zucchini. Mix lightly, but well. Add flour, soda, salt, cinnamon, and baking powder. Add nuts and raisins, and mix well. use wide-mouth pint canning jars. Spray inside of jars with vegetable spray. Place jars on cookie sheet and fill half full. Do not fill over half full with batter. This is very important. Bake at 325 degrees for 45 minutes. Have round disks cut from waxed paper ready and when cooking time is up place waxed paper disks in top of jar and seal immediately with lids and rings. Be sure waxed paper fits down inside of jar and does not lay on edge of jar. Jars are extremely hot, so be very careful. Makes 5 or 6 jars.

This same procedure can be used for pumpkin bread, banana bread, etc.

Note: This is a nice shelf item for drop in guests. Good with cream cheese.

CORRECTION — Ruth Bricker, Glen Rock, writes that the recipe for Spiced Tomato Jam, which appeared in the Oct. 10 issue, should read 4½ cups sugar and not 3 cups.

Sports Laundry

Athletic uniforms are a real challenge as you try to remove perspiration, mud, grass stains and still keep the outfits looking sharp. Most sport uniforms are made of synthetic fibers such as nylon, polyester, spandex or a blend of fibers. Read and follow the instructions for laundering on the tag in the garment precisely.

One of the biggest problems is dye bleeding. The Care labels recommend cold water to prevent fading and dye transfer. If you follow the directions and the color bleeds, return to the manufacturer.

Be aware that detergents do not activate in water temperature below 65 degrees F. If the temperature of the water in the tub of the washer is too cold for your hands, the detergent will not activate and clean effectively, according to the Maytag Company. If the water is very cold, you may need to add some warm to bring the temperture up to between 65 and 75 degrees to activate the detergent. In general, the liquid formula detergents work better in cold water than powdered types.

• Pre-treat mud, grass and blood before washing with a pre-treat laundry product.

• Detergents and pre-treaters lose their effectiveness after 30 minutes of soaking. Extended soaking is not recommended and may result in redeposition of soil.

• Dry athletic uniforms using low temperatures. Shrinkage and permanent wrinkles may result from high dryer temperatures. Immediately remove uniforms from the dryer when it stops to prevent wrinkles.

• Air dry sport uniforms with laminated numbers and letters.

When ironing, make sure the iron is set at the proper setting. An iron temperature set for low, such as polyester, is usually safe for the fabric.

How do worms get inside nuts?

Tiny worms you might find inside acorns, chestnuts or other kinds of nuts didn't wriggle their way inside. They hatched there!

First of all, the tiny worms are technically called larvae, and they belong to a group of insects called weevils. Take a close look at any kind of weevil, and you'll see a long, ardvark-like snout.

Like many insects, weevils go through three stages of growth — larval, pupal and adult. In late summer, adult weevils emerge from tiny nests, or pupal chambers, in the ground. After mating, females lay their eggs in nuts, one egg per nut.

Because the nut is still growing in late summer, its shell is still soft. That makes it easy for the female weevil to puncture the newly forming nut with her mouth. She then deposits her eggs in the tiny hole, and plugs it so you can't tell there is anything inside.

The eggs hatch within days. The baby weevils feed on the growing kernel inside their nut-shaped nursery until they are ready to burrow out of the nut in late fall. Usually, they drop to the ground, make a winter nest in the soil and change into their final form, just in time for next summer — so they can start the cycle all over again!

Keeping The Environment Sheep Shape

(David Cornwell for ASI)

(NAPS)—Everyday is Earth Day for American sheep. They help prevent damage from wildfires by controlling tall grass and brush. They regenerate forests after a blaze. And they control pesky weeds that render useless public and private lands. An added bonus: sheep produce an all-natural, biodegradable resource—wool. Here are just a few ways sheep help protect and preserve the environment.

This summer, as they have for more than 15 years, sheep will help control brush and keep grass short on 13,000 acres of ridge-top fire breaks in Southern California's Angeles National Forest. The firebreaks are a vital barrier between raging wildfires and nearby Los Angeles. The four-footed weed-whackers typically are less expensive to use than equipment to uproot brush or cut grass, and they are far better for the environment than herbicides, say U.S. Forest Service managers.

In Texas, wool is being transformed into oil-thirsty pads, mats, booms and mitts for use throughout the oil industry. Unlike man-made petroleum-based products typically used to sponge up oil spills, wool can absorb up to 30 times its weight in oil and still repel water. Plus, the biodegradable products can be squeezed dry and reused up to eight times.

In the Great Plains and West, sheep form a formidable line of defense against alien invaders—noxious weed imports such as leafy spurge. Poisons can't eradicate leafy spurge, except in small, young patches, and the cost of spraying often is prohibitively high. What does work, according to land managers, is sheep grazing. While other animals shun the plant, sheep find leafy spurge a real taste treat.

Along these lines, the Nature Conservancy has called on sheep to help control weeds that threaten to crowd out native grasses and endangered plant species in a Northern California preserve. Established in 1982, the 1,500-acre Willis Zinn Jepson Prairie Preserve harbors rare vernal pools that are home to plant and animal species found nowhere else in the United States. Up to 4,000 ewes are seasonally employed to control weeds by simulating the way elk and deer once grazed the land. It's a win-win situation for the preserve and for the sheep, say preserve administrators.

Elsewhere in the nation, sheep help organic farmers control pest-harboring brush and weeds without the use of herbicides. In orchards, sheep can "mow" closer to trees without damaging them, swiftly clean up fallen fruit and then leave behind a rich, natural fertilizer that helps the orchard flourish.

For more information on sheep and the environment, call the American Sheep Industry Association at (303) 771-3500, ext. 30, or visit the ASI Web site at http:// www.sheepusa.org.

RECYCLE IS TURNING OLD ITEMS INTO NEW ONES - Look for the recycling symbol ♻ on items you buy. Recyclables include - aluminum (soda cans), steel (food cans), glass, paper, newspaper, cardboard and some plastics. Make space in your house and school to store these items. If you recycle, you won't need as much space for trash. Remember to rinse things out before you put them in the recycling bin.

Consuming Thoughts

It's times for the "Great Pumpkin" to light up the night with his bright, saw-tooth grin. But this versatile squash has a lot more going for it than simply its use as porch decoration. Here are some tasty alternatives for fall menus.

Cooked Pumpkin: For pumpkins of less than three pounds, cut in half, scoop out the seeds and place one half, rind-side up, on a glass pie plate or utility dish. Cook in the microwave on high for 20-25 minutes, or until tender in the center. Repeat with remaining pumpkin half.

For large pumpkins, seed and cut into three-inch wedges and arrange rind-side up in a glass utility dish. Cover with wax paper and cook in microwave on high until all pieces are tender. You may need to rearrange the inside pieces to the outside to assure uniform distribution of cooking.

After letting the cooked pumpkin cool, remove meat from the rind and mash or puree. Slicing it off the rind with a knife is the easiest method. Yields 1 cup of mashed pumpkin per 1 pound of raw pumpkin.

Toasted Pumpkin Seeds: Healthy Method - In a bowl, mix 1 cup cleaned and dried pumpkin seeds with 1 teaspoon oil. Spread in a heat proof glass dish, then microwave 3-4 minutes, stirring frequently. Seeds should be crisp when cooled.

And when the "ghosts and goblins" gather for a Halloween party, what kinds of party fare will you provide this year?

Why not make your party treats count nutritionally? Instead of candies, consider fruits, vegetables, breads, cereals, milk, cheese, meats, peanut butter, nuts and seeds. Not only will they be good for the youngsters, they're fun too.

For younger children try:

• A fruit milkshake - a banana blended with milk and seasoned with a dash of nutmeg of cinnamon

•Cereal cookies baked on popsicle sticks.

At a Halloween party for older children or teenagers, try these popular but still healthful snacks.

•Hot spicy fruit juices.

•Celery stuffed with cottage cheese, bean dip, peanut butter with raisins or, pimento cheese.

•snack pizza - Guests choose their own toppings from lean ground beef, lean ham bits, onions, mushrooms, and green pepper.

Farm Couple Sows 75 Years Together

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

BETHEL (Lancaster Co.) — Wednesday marked the 75th wedding anniversary of David and Grace Daub.

David, who is 96 years old, and his 94-year-old wife are still living on their Lebanon County farm.

"We had 225 acres at one time, but sold some off," David said of the 62 acres they rent to a neighboring farmer. He farmed the land until he was 90 years old.

But the lure of the land still beckons. Grace went to the barn to feed a few chickens and to her large, well-kept garden to pull a few weeds and admire a variety of blooming flowers. She uses two canes, a long one and a short one to lean against while pulling weeds, but she discards the canes when entering the house.

David, who uses a walker in the house, said that he no longer works outside.

"When you get as old as I am, you get the right to sit and watch T.V.," he said with a chuckle.

He delights in talking about the farm and the butchering shop that he and his wife operated on the farm.

"We farmed in the summer and did custom butchering in the winter," he said.

The couple had hundreds of customers assigned a day for them to bring steers and pigs to the shop for butchering.

Grace said, "We made sausage, pudding, scrapple—everything. We worked from sun up to sundown."

When the couple married in 1923, Grace was 19 and David, 21.

"We didn't live together that first year because we didn't have our own place," Grace said of the common custom of the bride remaining with her family while the husband worked as a hired hand for someone else.

That first year, she continued to milk cows, churn butter, and "do everything from scratch," she said of working on her parents' farm.

"He came to see me on weekends," Grace said.

The couple first met at a nearby carnival. After that, they ran into one another at other public events.

"After he took me home one night, we were a couple," Grace said.

When the couple purchased their first farm, it was small, and David worked at off-the-farm jobs. He recalled that he worked at the first poultry operation in Fredericksburg. "I was the first employee," he said with pride.

The switch from horse transportation to motor transportation made David's job more enjoyable as he drove to distant cities to market and to purchase poultry.

David was eager to exchange working the fields with tractor power rather than horsepower.

When asked about the Depression Era, David said, "We came through."

His wife said, "We always had enough to eat."

The couple had five children, who are still alive. The family has grown to include 11 grandchildren, 12 great grandchildren, five step grandchildren, and one great-great grandchild.

The Daubs' home is decorated with much of Grace's handiwork. Quilts, pillows, braided rugs, and fine tatting and crocheted doilies are proof of her skilled labor.

Family members held a celebration for the couple last Sunday. Two television stations and several newspapers came to broadcast the Daubs' 75th anniversary celebration.

Ida's Notebook

by Ida Risser

One day last week my husband announced that he was going to his camper in Snyder County to bring his boat home. As I was expected to go along, I made sandwiches and cut up some carrot and celery sticks. My choice was a thermos of water and his was one of coffee.

Traveling on busy highways is not my idea of pleasure. And so, I was glad when we arrived safely at Jack's Mountain. On the way there we stopped twice — one time for a container of fishing worms and another time for a bag of chips and a box of crackers.

After lunch we tried fishing at Walker Lake which is in the vicinity of our camper. There were only two boats on the very large lake. The geese that spent the summer on the lake had gone south. A few of the leaves on the maple trees had turned to red and yellow and were reflected in the water.

We only caught 10 small fish but I'm always glad that we get some instead of none. The last time that I fished in the Conestoga River, here at our farm, I did not even get a nibble. Now that is discouraging.

Since my husband put a bigger hitch on his car the chain to tow the boat was not long enough and so he took the heavy one used to tow the camper. Now the boat is covered with a heavy green canvas and stored for the winter season and the camper has been winterized.

Here at home I'm not ready for winter as there are many flower bulbs to dig if the ground gets drier. We expect a lot of sweet potatoes too after the vines die. Soon I can stop picking pole limas as we have had a very good crop this year.

Old Dogs Can Learn New Tricks

The '90s might be classified as a decade of information overload, and for older adults this can be frustrating! Just when you think you've adjusted to the "latest innovation," it's gone and another more complicated one has taken it's place. But I've been reminded in recent months that older adults can learn new skills and make important adjustments in when necessary.

I guess I've known them for a long time. My grandmother at age 87 set out to learn computer skills (since all her grandchildren and great grandchildren were well-versed in it, she thought she should be too).

This past week, I spent time talking with a senior citizens' group about consumer scams. Although seniors make up only 15 percent of the population in the United States, they are 30 percent of the identified consumer fraud victims. To protect themselves, they must learn "new tricks," sometimes uncomfortable tricks.

Here are a few of the "tricks" that I suggest. Don't be afraid to be abrupt with a telemarketer. Hang up the phone. Interrupt the caller during the first sentence and say, "I'm not interested. Please take me off your calling list." Several participants have decided not to pick up the phone until the fourth or sixth ring. This usually eliminates the nuisance calls.

A second trick I encourage is to double and triple check all bills before paying them. Do you remember placing the order and receiving the product or service described? Are you sure you have not paid the bill previously. It is important NOT to trust that the notice you receive in the mail is accurate and legitimate. Widows and widowers need to be particularly skeptical. "Obituary ghouls" sometimes read death notices in the paper and send widows bills for non-existent debts Don't ever pay a bill until you have checked it carefully.

In 1998, Pennsylvania senior citizens who receive food stamps from the government needed to make another difficult adjustment. Their benefits are now sent to them electronically. They must make purchases using a card similar to a MAC card. It's important to know two things about the system. If you are house-bound or uncomfortable using the system, you may name someone else as your authorized representative. That person can use the card to make food purchases for you.

The second thing to be aware of with this new system is that a person needs to access the account at least once every 45 days (even in the dead of winter) in order to keep the account active. If you are a recipient, or if you have a family member who is, be sure to follow these rules, so that you don't lose that important benefit.

Technology is not only changing for us, it's changing for criminals, too. I learned from a recent insurance newsletter that thieves have devices that can decipher the code on a garage door opener which allows them to open your door electronically and slip into your house unnoticed. To protect yourself, unplug your garage door opener before going on vacation or before going away for the winter, lock your garage door manually.

Some of these changes can be complicated. The good news is in an information age, you do have a lot more resources at your fingertips too—places that you can go to for help. Here are just a sampling of resources that may be of interest:

• American Institute for Cancer Research has a new resource guide. Specialized editions cover topics on breast, prostate, colon and lung cancers. Call 1-800-843-8144, extension 37, to request your copy.

• The Attorney General's Office has an excellent booklet giving more advice about avoiding consumer scams. They also have a hotline – 1-800-441-2555. Your state representative's office may have copies of this booklet on hand.

• AARP has a wealth of information available to its members on managed care, social security, crime prevention, and retirement planning. Call 1-800-424-3410. Call for more information on this organization.

And don't forget the wonderful local resources at your community public library and county Area Agency on Aging Office. There is a lot to absorb. Don't be intimidated by the volume of information. Pick the things that apply to you and challenge yourself to learn a few new tricks to improve your life and security.

The Housewife's Lament

One day I was walking, I heard a complaining,
And saw an old woman the picture of gloom.
She gazed at the mud on her doorstep ('twas raining)
And this was her song as she wielded her broom.
Chorus:
Oh, life is a toil and love is a trouble,
Beauty will fade and riches will flee,
Pleasures they dwindle and prices they double,
And nothing is as I would wish it to be.

There's to much of ironing goes to a shirt,
There's nothing that pays for the time you waste on it,
There's nothing that lasts us but trouble and dirt.
In March it is mud, it is slush in December,
The midsummer breezes are loaded with dust,
In fall the leaves litter, in muddy September
The wallpaper rots and the candlesticks rust.
There are worms on the cherries and slugs on the roses,
And ants in the sugar and mice in the pies,
The rubbish of spiders no mortal supposes
And ravaging roaches and damaging flies.
With grease and with grime from corner to centre,
Forever at war and forever alert,
No rest for a day lest the enemy enter,
I spend my whole life in a struggle with dirt.
Last night in my dreams I was stationed forever
On a far little rock in the midst of the sea,
My one chance of life was a ceaseless endeavor
To sweep off the waves as they swept over me.
Alas! 'Twas no dream; ahead I behold it,
I see I am helpless my fate to avert.—
She lay down her broom, her apron she folded,
She lay down and died and was buried in dirt.

ANSWER — Floy Eberly, Stevens, wanted complete words to the following poem sent in by Eleanor Osborne of Bel Air, Md.,

Recessional

God of our fathers, known of old,
Lord of our far-flung battle-line,
Beneath whose awful hand we hold
Dominion over palm and pine—
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!
The tumult and the shouting dies;
The captains and the kings depart:
Still stands Thine ancient sacrifice,
An humble and a contrite heart.
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!
Far-called, our navies melt away;
On dune and headland sinks the fire:
Lo, all our pomp of yesterday
Is one with Nineveh and Tyre!
Judge of the Nations, spare us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!
If drunk with sight of power, we loose
Wild tongues that have not Thee in awe,
Such boastings as the Gentiles use,
Or lesser breeds without the Law—
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!
For heathen heart that put her trust
In reeking tube and iron shard,
All valiant dust that builds on dust,
And guarding calls not Thee to guard,
For frantic boast and foolish word—
Thy Mercy on They People, Lord!

Mifflin County Farm Bureau Meeting Centers On Act 50

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

LEWISTOWN (Mifflin Co.) — Members of the Mifflin County Farm Bureau met at Hoss's Steak and Sea House in Lewistown recently to adopt policy, elect directors, and to learn more about Act 50, the Taxpayers' Local Control Act.

According to Pennsylvania Farm Bureau Regional Organizational Director Roger Sheesley, Act 50 would provide for taxation based on ability to pay, not on land ownership. The act is an effort to put control back into the hands of the taxpayer.

"This is not just a Farm Bureau issue. It's a rural and taxpayers' issue. We're the vehicle to drive it home," Sheesley said.

Under Act 50, each school district would choose whether or not to change the basis for taxation from land ownership to income. Nuisance taxes would be eliminated, including occupational taxes. Citizens can petition for a public vote should the school district decide not to change. Sheesley said farmers are hit harder under the present tax system because they own the land and do not always see an increase in income. Act 50 would not conflict with Clean and Green or the Homestead Act.

Sheesley recognized President Mark Ellinger and Membership Chairman Ken Loht with American Farm Bureau Federation membership awards. Loht signed up more than 20 new members in 1998.

Member Relations Director Elrose Glick recognized Helen Kirk for her efforts as county newsletter editor and county information director and Ken Loht as membership chairman. He asked members to look ahead a few years and present ideas for MCFB's 50th anniversary celebration.

State Director Wayne Freeman presented bonus and co-op checks to Membership Chairman Ken Loht and MCFB President Mark Ellinger. Kent Spicher, Marlin Dunmire, and Orville Heister were elected to serve three-year terms on the Mifflin County Farm Bureau board.

Legislative Chairman Dave Esh presented Senator Corman with a basket filled with Mifflin County products in appreciation for his honesty, integrity, and many years of good communication.

The members adopted the following policies: 1. We recommend the Limited Winery Act be amended to allow 25 percent non-Pennsylvania grapes to be used for wine production in accordance with the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms regulations; 2. We recommend that Mifflin County School Board investigates Act 50 and use it as a starting point to instigate local property tax reform.

Zern's Market Attracts 25,000 To 30,000 People Weekly

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

GILBERTSVILLE (Montgomery Co.) — "You've got to do a story on 'Zernies,'" reader Kermit Laub wrote to this paper. "It sure is something to see."

Laub's been going to the market for about 50 years. "I went when there wasn't much there," Laub said.

Today, between 25,000 and 30,000 people visit Zern's Farmers Market in Gilbertsburg every weekend.

Folks come to buy fresh picked produce, sample Pennsylvania Dutch treats such as funnel cake, corn relish, and shoo fly pie. They come to bid on used furniture, search for a nostalgic treasure at the flea market or participate in a Bingo game. Some even come to have their hair cut and their glasses cleaned.

"We sell everything, from A to Z," said Kim Kline, who took over management of the market two years ago.

With more than 400 stands, Zern's draws a unique mixture of customers. Some come because it's a family tradition.

"My grandparents came, my parents came, and now I come every Saturday night," said a customer.

The market began in 1922 with a handful of farmers who brought excess garden vegetables, hay, and straw to sell to sell in the Zern family's yard.

"They sold off the back of their pick-up trucks," Kline said.

Farmers still come and bring freshly picked vegetables and fruits to sell. But the market has long expanded to varied merchandise and even to holding special events and shows such as a Native American Show, an Elvis weekend, and a community choir competition.

This summer, a new marketing concept was birthed at Zerns. According to Kline, an antiques and collectible bid board was started. Customers enter a written bid on display items. At the end of the month, the items go to the highest bidders.

Jim Smiley, who manages the bid board, said that the concept represents an efficient way of exposing and selling antique and collectible pieces, including estate items.

Bidders who are reluctant to bid at the fast-moving pace of a public auction can examine the items closely, make a reasonable bid, and even return to the bid board and increase the bid if they see it is going to another bidder.

Participation is high and both Smiley and Kline expect the giant, silent auction to attract thousands.

Kline likes to tell the story of how one of the auctioners fell in love with a young lady from Philadelphia in 1949.

She persuaded her father to come to the secluded country setting to see the market. Her dad, who had an interest in the clothing business, found the market fascinating, and a lot different than he was accustomed to on South Street, Philadelphia. Ben Silver persuaded his employer Morris Lipton to accompany him to the the market.

The Philadelphia entreprencur visited the market, saw the potential of a profitable venture, and purchased it in 1949.

Together Morris Lipton and Ben Silver guided the market's expansion. Old wooden rafters and dirt floors formed the setting for the market. Vendors hung clothing from the rafters and candles were used for light during evening hours.

Three fires almost destroyed the market during the 1960s and 1970s, but each time, it was rebuilt. The main building now stretches a mile long.

Lipton and Silver both died, but it's still a family business, according to Kline.

Although the market is only opened weekends, it's an every day workload for Kline and a crew of workers.

Stand rentals, promotion, building repairs, maintenance, meeting with township authorities, insurance, legal manners, and survey competition are part of the behind-the-scenes work required to operate the market and such added fringes as a midway section, plant and flower auction, and a tractor pull.

"We've added a few new things, but it still maintain flavor of farmers' market," Kline said.

Customers can shop at the markets on Fridays from 2 p.m. until 10 p.m. and on Saturdays from 11 a.m. until 10 p.m.

Directions to Zerns: From Philadelphia, take Schuylkill Expressay (Rt. 76 W) to Exit 26B. Take Route 422 W to Pottstown to Rt. 100 N, go 7 miles to Rt. 73 (Boyerstown exit), turn right. Zerns is a half mile on the right.

If you get lost, call (610) 367-2461.

Free parking and admission.

Kim Kline manages Zern's Farmers Market. Although it continues to grow, Kline wants it to maintain it's farm market flavor.

More than 400 merchants sell produce under one roof that is said to stretch more than one mile long.

Granger's Legacy Lives On Through Toy Projects

FREEDOM (Beaver Co.) — In life, Mary-Lee Steel wove her love for sewing with her desire to do community service through the Pennsylvania State Grange's Stuffed Toy Project.

So strong was her passion for this particular women's activities project that her home was transformed every fourth Tuesday of the month into a Santa's workshop, of sorts, as Grangers gathered to use their hands to craft toys. Upon completion, the toys are donated to ambulance services, hospitals, homes, women's shelters, and police stations to help calm children during a traumatic experience.

When Mary-Lee, who was women's activities (WA) director in Beaver County, unexpectedly passed away last March, her passion didn't die with her. In fact, the very flame that fanned that passion has spread to Grange members all across Beaver County.

"We were at her house just two days before she passed away and she jokingly said we should shoot for 1,000 toys this year," director Deb Elliott said. "At the time, we all kind of laughed at what she said. Then, after she passed away, we decided we would do it (make 1,000 toys) in memory of her."

As a rural and community service organizatoin dedicated to improving the lives of all Pennsylvanians, the Pennsylvania State Grange has led the nation in the number of toys made the past six consecutive years out of the 22 that the National Grange has sponsored it. In 1997, Pennsylvania Grangers made nearly 9,000 toys in what has become commonly known as a "Labor of Love."

"When you are working on these you can't help but think about the kids who will be getting them," Elliott said. "But when you see them get the toys or hear that they are being put to good use it is so much different than just thinkig about it."

Reaching the 1,000-toy goal was quite a task considering the Pomona (county) Grange members were increasing their output by nearly 60 percent over last year. PA State Grange Women's Activities Director Becky Michalka said Beaver Pomona members made over 400 toys in 1997.

At the Beaver Medical Center Mariann Murtha, pediatric nurse, left, and Deb Elliot, women's activities director for the Grange, talk to Grange President Bill Steel about his late wife's legacy that lives on through the toy project.

"We have been working on toys at our Grange (Hookstown) before the meeting," Elliott said. "And everyone has been involved — men, women, youth members and Junior Grangers — one way or another. Whether they were sewing or stuffing them with polyester fiber, everyone has pitched in to help."

Mary-Lee's husband, Bill, who is the president of the Pennsylvania State Grange, is proud that the members have met their goal.

"I'm delighted that they accepted the challenge and that they have carried through with it," Steel said. "Mary-Lee was quite active. She also participated in the needlework contest and made quilts for at-risk babies and lap robes for nursing home residents."

Elliott said the toys will be boxed at Hookstown Grange and shipped to various charitable organizations in Beaver and Allegheny counties, East Liverpool, Ohio and West Virginia.

"Little Traditions" Often Mean the Most

Several months ago, I was reminded by my 3-year-old daughter how quickly traditions can take root in a family. We were getting ready for bedtime one night when she said to me "Don't forget my milk, Mom. Daddy always gets me milk before bedtime." Sine that time, I've heard her repeat this familiar message many nights before her bedtime. It's a simple request but one of profound importance, as it reminds me of how the simplest acts provide children with such a familiar sense of the "way things are always done" in the family.

Family traditions serve just this purpose by giving children a sense of familiarity, comfort, support and caring. It's those dozens, even hundreds, of little rituals that are unique to each family year-round as well as during the holidays. Maybe it's the way Wednesday night has been designated as "leftover night" in your home, or that you visit Grandma every Sunday after church. Special foods, games, activities, stories, decorations, parties, religious celebrations, and get-togethers with family and friends also come to mind when one thinks of celebrating family traditions.

Contrary to what many believe, traditions do not have to be elaborate celebrations, in fact, it's the "little traditions" – simple acts such as eating meals together, celebrating birthdays, or enjoying a special storytime – that often mean the most to children and that they recall most fondly as they grow older. The nice thing about such rituals is they they often are not planned — most simply happen naturally as a result of family members sharing time together.

Particularly during this time of year, it's a great time to begin to think about those traditions that mean the most to you, and those that you hope to pass on to other family members. Here are a few ideas for simple family activities that can help to strengthen your ties, not only during the holidays, but throughout the year.

• Hold an "I Remember When ... " session with as many extended family members as possible. Let each family member recall significant events that have been meaningful to them. Young and old generations will love reminiscing about life long ago and now.

• Make a family tablecloth each year to be used at dinnertime or at special family outings. Use a plain white cloth sheet and let family members draw or paint designs on it and sign their name. You may wish to design a "family emblem" or motto to draw on your tablecloth.

• Make it a tradition each holiday season to do something nice for those service providers who mean the most to your family — child care providers, teachers, or mail and newspaper carriers. Youngsters will enjoy learning about the spirit of giving!

• Hang a family bulletin board in your kitchen, family room or hallway. Each family member can have his or her own section to share achievements, talents, messages or snapshots. Create a special seasonal display for important holidays.

• Make it a point to sit down for as many meals together during the week as you can. While families today are busy, nothing promotes quality family time together better than sitting down together for meals. Some fun conversation starters include "What's something funny that happened today?" or "If you could have three wishes, what would they be?".

• Celebrate a joint clean-up project together. A regularly celebrated "clean-the-attic" party can be a great way to enjoy time together while sharing treasures from the past. Be sure to enjoy a favorite meal after all the hard work is done!

• Play games together The old adage "families who play together, stay together" certainly has it's merits.

• Keep a family photo album or scrapbook of family events and activities. Video cameras offer another great way to preserve cherished family moments Have a "Family Night" where you can enjoy eating popcorn while watching your favorite home videos.

• Finally, make your own list of "little traditions" that your family now enjoys or would like to enjoy in the future!

As a pediatric nurse at the Hershey Medical Center, Margaret travels to Honduras annually with a medical team. According to Margaret, Honduras is the second poorest country in the world. The team saw 200 patients during the two-week visit. Many children have severe problems such as Spina Bifida, limb length discrepancy, and club feet.

In other business, Karen Sellers reported on the activities of the different Farm Women societies throughout the county.

A bazaar table during the day helped raised funds. Members each donated a baby item to be distributed to those in need through Lebanon County Christian Ministries.

Three members were presented pins for being more than 80 years of age. Ruth Bucher, who is 90-years-old, was unable to attend the convention, but will receive a pin in honor of her age.

Improve Your Memory

THE MYSTERIES OF MEMORY, HOW TO IMPROVE IT

Do you have days when you forget your own telephone number or your neighbor's name? We all have a fear of losing our memory. Fear of Alzheimer's disease is common among older American with memory problems.

Dr. Barry Gorden, M.D., director of John Hopkins University's Memory Disorders Clinic states, "If you really have a severe memory problem, you don't remember what happened; you don't know you made a mistake."

Dr. Gordon also says "That while what we call memory abilities decline with age, most older people—even those with memory problems—won't get Alzheimer's."

MEMORY BOOSTERS

You can boost your memory. In fact, Dr. Gordon says that almost anything people try, including just hoping memory will improve, works to some degree in the short term. In addition to paying attention and repeating, he offers other suggestions to improve your memory.

• Take care of yourself. Research has indicated exercising, maintaining a healthy weight, and sleeping enough help people's mental abilities as well as their memories.

• Establish a spot to put things you need to remember. Dr. Gordon suggests avoid having to remember things is the best way to boost your memory. By establishing a spot to put things you often misplace, like your keys, you won't have to remember where you put them.

• Determine what you need to remember Know what it is you most want to remember—names and birthdays, for example—can prevent you from wasting time and energy trying to remember things not important to you.

• Make learning conscious. Telling yourself this is something you want to remember will help to lock it in your memory.

• Make memory meaningful. Associating something you want to remember, such as a name with something more interesting or meaningful to you, such as a song, can help you remember.

• Try memory aids. These can be note cards or anything else you can carry with you to write things down on. "Just having a memory aid available makes you so much more comfortable," says Dr. Gorden. And the thought you are going to write down often means you don't have to write it down at all to remember it.

• Use a memory partner. Ask your spouse or a close friend to help you remember something.

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — ON Wednesday, Oct. 7, Jared Treichler of Fleetwood won the Outstanding Market Hog Project with his Duroc market hog, "Scar."

This year Berks County participated in a pilot program where they chose an outstanding market project rather than a champion animal. The 4-H'er received points for showmanship, a skill-a-thon, and for the animal itself. The person with the highest points at the end of the 3-part program was chosen outstanding market project and sold first on the 4-H swine sale.

Jared had received first place in the skill-a-thon intermediate division, third place in the intermediate showmanship, and first with his hog, "Scar," for a total of 98 points. Ben Weist won reserve champion market with his cross-bred market hog, "Sandy." Ben received first place in the senior division skill-a-thon, second place in the senior division showmanship, and third place with his market hog, "Sandy," for a total of 95 points. Gwen Powers, a junior, came in third with a score of 94.

Improve Your Memory

• Don't expect perfection. Everyone forgets something from time to time, so don't be unreasonable with yourself.

FORGET ME NOT

No matter how hard we try, forgetting names is a common problem. A recent survey by John Hopkins researcher, Karen Bolla surveyed Americans about their memory complaints and names topped the list. The things most people forget are listed below. You will probably feel better about yourself after you read the list, and realize you are not unusual when it comes to forgetting things.

Names – 83%; where something is – 60%; phone numbers just checked – 57%; words – 53%; not knowing you already told something to someone – 49%; forgetting what people have told you – 49%; faces – 42%; directions – 41%; forgetting what you started to do – 41%; forgetting what you were saying – 41%; and remembering what you have done (e.g. lock door) – 38%.

'Heavy Metal' Might Mean Profit On Older Farms

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Farmers may harvest profits from scrap iron, steel and other valuable metals contained in old vehicles, equipment and products that have not been removed from the farm, according to two researchers in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

According to James Garthe, instructor in agricultural engineering, farmers can clean up their acreage and reap a small profit by marketing their scrap metal to interested dealers. "The amount of money gained from selling scrap metal is nowhere near enough to retire on, but it will bring a decent price if the metals are separated and handled correctly," Garthe said.

Although farmers may not believe they have enough metal to make a cleanup worthwhile, Garthe said, "farm steel," a generic term for any scrap metal from farmsteads, can add up quickly. Salable metal items include abandoned vehicles, old tractors and equipment, engines, farm gates, applicances, fencing, wire and building materials.

"A typical farm easily can have several tons of scrap metal," said Jennifer Shufran, research associate in agricultural engineering. "Most farmers will not want to plan an intensive cleanup. The best approach, from a labor standpoint, is to pick up scrap metals during winter down times, or as you clear a field or work other jobs on the farm."

Shufran said the more initial work the farmer does, the more profit is harvested from scrap metal. "If you gather everything into a pile and call the scrap dealer to pick it up, you'll make money," she said. "But you can get much better prices from dealers if you separate each type of scrap metal, and an even higher price if you haul each separated pile to the dealer."

Garthe lists different metals and a few products made from those metals in an approximate descending order of value.

- Copper: Wire (worth more with insulation removed) and plumbing pipes.
- Brass: Wire, plumbing fittings, radiator cores.
- Aluminum: Farm gates, roofing, siding, engine components.
- Stainless steel: Tanks, fittings, bolts.
- Bulk steel: Rods, pipes, structural components, shafts, gears, pulleys, chains.
- Sheet metal: Siding, drums.
- Cast iron: Bathtubs, transmissions, gearcases, wheel hubs.
- Zinc: Handles, fixtures and various castings.

Garthe emphasizes that large and small items should be dismantled if they are made from different metals. Cars, however, usually are taken without any dismantling.

Shufran suggests farmers establish a long-range plan for collecting scrap metal, encouraging employees and family members to collect and separate metals as they tackle other jobs.

"Most scrap metal is scattered over the farm and along field edges," she said. "Farmers should establish a central staging area to collect and separate the metal, then add to it over time until the farm has been cleaned up."

Garthe suggests looking in the Yellow Pages under "Scrap Metal" or "Scrap Yards" to find dealers that evaluate a farm's scrap metal.

"In the scrap business it pays to shop around for prices," Shufran said. "Some scrap dealers may pay double what another pays for the same metal. If you're hauling the metal yourself, it can really make a difference in price."

Garthe also points out that farmers should clean up their scrap metal if needed, removing plastics, glass, rubber, insulation and draining all fluids, such as oils or gasoline, from equipment. "Some materials may require a certified professional to remove it," Garthe said. "For example, a heating, ventilation and air-conditioning technician must remove CFC refrigerants from refrigerators, freezers and bulk milk tanks before they can be sold."

"Cleaning up scrap metal has incentives other than money," Shufran said. "It increases the value of the farm, makes the farm safer for workers, children and neighbors, and improves animal safety and health."

Mid-Atlantic September Milk $16.77

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Middle Atlantic Order Acting Market Administrator David Z. Walker recently announced a September 1998 weighted average milk price of $16.77 per hundredweight.

The weighted average differential price was $1.59 per hundredweight and the producer nonfat milk solids (NFMS) price was 42 cents per pound.

The weighted average price was up $1.44 from August and was $3.78 higher than a year earlier. The producer NFMS price was down 59 cents from last September.

The nonfat milk solids price, applicable to handler payments, was 42.59 cents per pound for the month, down 59.13 cents from last year.

The gross value of September producer milk, adjusted to 3.4 percent butterfat was $78.2 million, compared to $61.6 million a year ago.

Mr. Walker said that producer receipts totaled 470.8 million pounds during Septembrer, a decrease of 7.2 million pounds from last September and the average daily delivery of 3,347 pounds per producer decreased 49 pounds or 1.4 percent from a year earlier.

A total of 4,689 producers supplied Order 4 handlers during the month, a decrease of three from a year ago.

Class I producer milk totaled 236.4 million pounds and was down 12.1 million pounds, or 4.9 percent from last September. Class I milk accounted for 50.22 percent of total producer milk receipts during the month, compared with 52 percent in September 1997.

The average NFMS test of producer milk was 8.62 percent, down from 8.69 percent the previous year. The average butterfat test of producer milk was 3.59 percent, up from 3.56 percent in September 1997.

Middle Atlantic Order pool handlers reported Class I in-area milk sales of 186.8 million pounds during September, a decrease of 2.1 percent from a year earlier, after adjustment to eliminate variation due to calendar composition.

BIG SQUARES BALES

ORDER NOW FOR 1999 DELIVERY

More and more farmers are making hay the big way. More farmers are buying square balers from Hoober, Inc. With three models to choose from, the reasons to buy a CASE IH big square baler are clear:

Productivity

CASE IH big square bales are easier to handle, and that means you can be more productive. In fact, with a CASE IH big square baler you can bale up to 20 tons of hay per hour.

Shipping

CASE IH big square bales give you large transport payload. Since bales are stackable, you can fit more hay into a limited area. The bottom line is more bales of hay per truckload.

High Moisture Capability

CASE IH 8575 & 8585 balers keep moisture in for better quality hay. Higher hay quality means more profits.

Less Leaf Loss

Hoober's Super Service

Hoober, Inc. has the experienced service mechanics who will keep your big square baler running strong.

AFS™ Fully Integrated, Field-Proven and Farmer Friendly.

Before Case IH Advanced Farming Systems, precision farming took a lot of courage - and a lot of work. Tracking yields or creating maps meant building a system entirely from scratch. You were on your own to find all the pieces you needed. Chances are, you had to go to several different sources to find the right equipment. Then, once you had everything assembled, there was no guarantee the system would even work. Today, that's all changed. AFS is designed specifically for Case IH Axial-Flow combines. It includes everything you need, right from the start. All of the components - from sensors to software - works as a total system, without any hassle. AFS is field-proven; farmers like you have used it to log thousands of acres. Plus, AFS is so easy to use, anyone can do it. In fact, you can create detailed, color yield maps in minutes... even with little or no computer experience.

CLAAS® Country
Meeting all your harvesting needs!

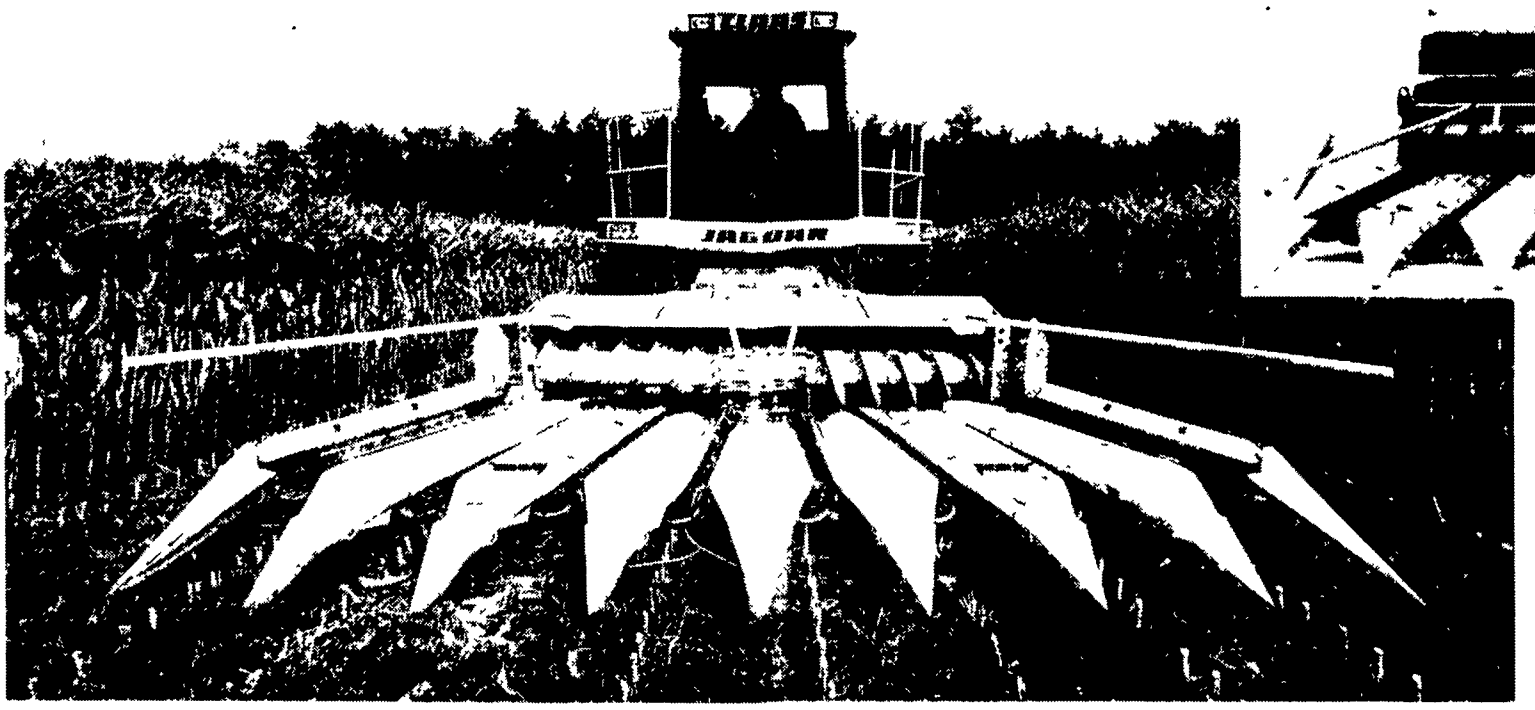
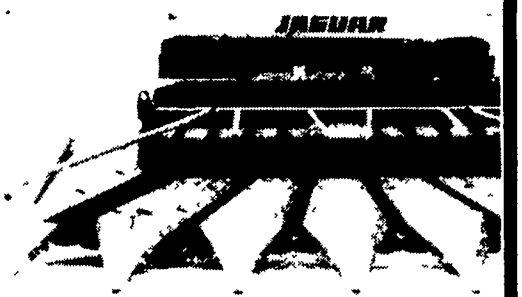
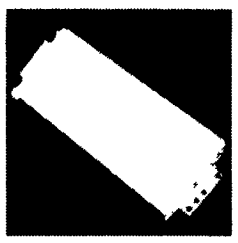
New dimensions in harvesting corn

Corn headers from CLAAS are acknowledged by professionals as setting the standards for high speed silage corn harvesting at every stage of ripeness High performing JAGUAR foragers can be equipped - depending on the model - with 4, 6 or 8 row CLAAS headers





CLAAS also offers the tried and tested 6 row header alongside the 8 row version It has established an enthusiastic following among contractors and farmers for many years The outer picking units on the 6 row header are raised manually to reach the travel width of 10 feet



If you have to harvest very ripe corn silage you can fit the additional rasp floor concave in addition to the corn cracker Equipped with either 4 or 8 rasp bars, the crop is thoroughly grated including the very hard stems.

The extremely low and slim profile of the dividers collect hanging and laid crops with ease and feed them steadily to the intake auger The stem dividers above the header support this operation. Three or four header speeds enhance the crop flow In down corn the additional laid crop augers can be a useful option

The cutting discs are pretensioned to always work at the right pressure. They are self sharpening and maintenance free

The CLAAS AUTOPILOT is patented and is an essential tool in the corn harvest You can harvest without losses even in weed infested or hanging crops, in bad visibility or at night The forager is steered through the rows fully automatically You are free to focus your attention on the speed, the intake and chute

The 8 row header can be equipped with the sensor controlled CONTOUR PLUS height control The header hovers over the ground with no ground pressure, a big plus on soft or spongy ground.

The 8 row header is moved from the working to the transport position in a matter of minutes

It is simply folded up hydraulically

The 8 row corn header in front of the JAGUAR 880 lets you set up new output records. The combination of the JAGUAR 860 and the 8 row header is another ideal mix The benefits are clear fewer tracks in the field, reduced turning times, more flexibility when opening up the fields, reduced harvesting speeds whilst achieving virtually the same output Of course, there's no need to remove the 8 row header for road travel

You've Never Seen A Harvest Like This

Introducing The 2300 Series Axial-Flow® Combines.

The three 2300 Series combines are equipped with a high-visibility operator environment so revolutionary, everything else is history.

Wider, amazingly comfortable and designed with convenient cab-forward controls and instrumentation, this cab literally conforms to its occupant. An engineering landmark – Focalized Cab Mounting – minimizes motion for a smooth, steady ride. A multi-function propulsion lever puts most operations right in the palm of your hand. And an all-new right-hand console moves in tandem with your seat.

At the heart of the 2300 Series remains the strength of the Axial-Flow combine – the exclusive, patented rotor And the recent addition of the Cross Flow™ cleaning fan provides a remarkably uniform, powerful airflow throughout the entire sieve area

Why not stop by and see the new Case IH 2300 Series for yourself? We'll help you discover a better way of looking at your harvest.

O'Kane Becomes Human Resources Manager

SOUDERTON (Montgomery Co.) — Roger O'Kane, a seasoned human resources professional from Glen Mills, has been hired as the new human resources managear for the Souderton-based Moyer & Son, Inc., it was announced recently by company President John Moyer.

O'Kane held a similar position with Johnson Matthey, Ltd, a British-owned firm located in West Whiteland. He was graduated from Franklin Pierce College in Rindge, N.H., where he met his wife, Betty, of 24 years. The couple have three children and have lived in E. Windsor, N.J. and Syracuse, N.Y., prior to settling in Delaware County.

O'Kane's job is to meet the challenge of finding the right people to fill the many employment opportunities for the rapidly expanding Moyer & Son, Inc. As a company in the business of residential and commercial home services, pet feed manufacturing and the manufacturing and distribution of plant nutrients, the wide nature of the business requires their human resources employees to have a vast and diverse knowledge base.

"The goal set before me is to expand on the level of professionalism and excellence already in place at Moyer & Son, Inc.," O'Kane said. "An important part of meeting this goal will be for me to serve as a consultant to managers and supervisors in the various departments. This interaction will better serve the goals of Moyer & Son in continuing to hire top quality employees."

Heavy Duty AerWay Models Available

NORWICH, Ontario, Canada — Holland Equipment Limited (Norwich, Ontario) has introduced new heavy-duty AerWay models available in 25 and 30-foot operating widths

The AerWay models incorporate the patented AerWay Shattertine technology into heavy-duty, pull-type adjustable frames and were developed specifically to satisfy the demanding requirements of high acreage conservation farming operations.

Models feature 15-foot main frames with vertical folding wings. This unique frame and wing configuration provides for reduced road transport travel width while each wing feature two balanced rollers.

Both of the new 25-foot and 30-foot model widths are offered with rigid suspension components or the company's optional C-Flex suspension components designed for rocky soils.

The AerWay machine is growing in popularity for no-till applications due to its unique design. The AerWay Shattertines have a patented twist that lifts and shatters soils sideways, leaving the integrity of the soil profile intact and the majority of crop residue on the surface for conservation compliance. The resulting increased air and water infiltration promotes more successful plant growth in no-till environments.

Doebler's Hybrids Tests Varieties For Northeast

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Seed corn producer and distributor Doebler's Pennsylvania Hybrids Inc. of Jersey Shore has been harvesting and collecting data on 1998 field trials of corn varieties.

Over the past couple of weeks, as farmers have been taking in their forages and crops, the research staff at Doebler's has been on the road with their modified four-row combine, equipped with weight and moisture meters to gather yield data on hundreds of varieties being evaluated for possible inclusion in Doebler's list of corn hybrids especially suited to the Northeast.

Last week the crew harvested a trial field in the New Holland vicinity where full season varieties can be evaluated. It was the seventh and final visit to the site for the year.

In addition to seeding, thinning, enhancing plot definition, and other checks, the final check is for plant condition and yield. Two men lead out in the field in advance of the combine and make note of standability, dropped ears, etc.

According to Jim Breining, Doebler's research manager, the company had 21 trail sites established this year in Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania, Ohio and upstate New York.

This is the area for which Doebler's Hybrids are evaluated. The company evaluates the plants for their agronomic advantage so that can be delivered to Northeast farmers with every bag of seed.

The seed itself comes from nurseries, universities ... as many different sources as possible, Breining said, in order to be able to select varieties that Northeast farmers can use with advantage.

Three years of testing is normally needed before a new variety makes it into Doebler's lineup of quality, dependable hybrids.

The 21 testing sites provides Doebler's with a range of climate and soil conditions through which to test hybrids for the variety of conditions that face real farmers.

The Northeast is characterized by diversity in conditions, and farmer needs.

Whereas Mid Western states are characterized by broad areas of similar growing conditions that may or may not be found in the Northeast, that generic quality doesn't doesn't provide enough flexibility to meet the needs of Northeast farmers.

In Pennsylvania alone, the needs of farmers for corn ranges broadly in season length, moisture, soil conditions, type and severity of pests, standability, and use.

Doebler's slogan is, "Your regional advantage," because the three-generation family business has long recognized that farmers in the Northeast have many different needs in order to be competitive with other farmers in other areas.

A broad range of hybrids are tested under a range of conditions, and many varities are culled through the evaluation and selection process.

That is because the company's goal is to provide Northeastern farmers, especially, with the varieties that can be depended upon to give them a hybrid that meets their needs, whether it be a short season or long season corn, silage types, Roundup Ready and other herbicide resistant varities, Bt-varieties (naturally resistant to corn rootworm), and many others.

Inoculant Is Valuable Input

MOUNT JOY (Lancaster Co.) — Two years ago, Tom Kreider and George Nickle of Shady Birch Farms, Inc., Quarryville, began using Pioneer brand 1132 on their corn silage. The results have paid off.

"Our herd increased production from 20,473 pounds to 23,711 pounds," said Kreider, who operates the 170-cow family farm. Their butterfat has risen from 789 pounds in 1996 to 873 pounds today. Kreider and Nickle, who manages the cows, believe in the product so much that they won't put up any silage without adding 1132.

In addition to the gains in his herd's production, Kreider is appreciative of the services he receives from Marty Snyder, Pioneer sales representative, and Scott Osborne, nutritionist, Powl's Feed Service in Peach Bottom. "Marty and Scott have helped us get more out of our acres and our cows," said Kreider.

Pioneer 1132 is a second-generation product developed specifically for corn silage. "This inoculant promotes a faster, more efficient fermentation. It helps decrease losses that occur in tower, bunker, pile or bag silos," said Kurt Ruppel, dairy products specialist for Pioneer.

Case Announces Agreement To Acquire DMI, Inc.

RACINE, Wis. — Case Corporation announced an agreement to acquire DMI, Inc., a manufacturer of soil management equipment.

The acquisition will expand Case's offerings of tillage and fertilizer application products, including innovative residue management implements and soil management expertise.

"DMI shares Case's strong customer focus, said Jon Carlson, senior vice president and general manager of the North American agricultural business unit at Case. "Their knowledge and understanding of soil management complements our approach to providing farmers with the equipment, information and services they need to reduce their costs while increasing yields. Through this and other recent acquisitions, we have created a complete product line to support our customers through the four seasons of farming — planning, planting, growing and harvesting."

The DMI philosophy "Helping Plants Thrive™" involves understanding and managing the soil environment for optimum agronomic returns. The company's science-based approach has led to the development of practical technology to optimize soil conditions for greater yields and profit per acre.

"DMI's yield-till® system is based on sound agronomic research, similar to the Case IH Advanced Farming Systems (AFS) approach," said John Garrison, general manager of Case IH agricultural systems. "The implements cover the full range of tillage practices, with patented features designed to manage residue, reduce soil compaction and optimize seedbed conditions."

In addition to tillage equipment, DMI produces fertilizer applicators. These products are designed to optimize nutrient availability by banded applications of fertilizer in the root zone. This method accurately and consistently places liquid, dry or gas fertilizer near the plant, resulting in greater yields and reduced environmental impact.

DMI is an employee-owned company based in Goodfield, Ill. The company's 1997 revenues were $77 million.

Farm Bureau Reviews Year At Meeting

BETHANY (Wayne Co.) — The Wayne County Farm Bureau (WCFB) reviewed numerous topics at its annual dinner meeting at Bethany United Methodist Church recently.

Russell Gunton, of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, offer more than 60 members a message of encouragement. Agriculture is still the industry in Pennsylvania, directly employing one out of every five residents. Last year's Pennsylvania Agricultural exports reached a six-year high at $987.9 million. The commonwealth continues to actively pursue expansion — 100,000 pounds of Pennsylvania's poultry products were recently sold to Japan.

WCFB awarded scholarships to four area teachers to attend an intensive week of "Ag in the Classroom" at Penn State. This informative program is meant to bring the message of agriculture back to the students.

Two of this year's recipients addressed the membership. Nancy Dadig, a science teacher at St. Vincent's School, expressed gratitude for the eye-opening experience and plans to incorporate the materials from the hands-on experience into her lesson plans. Her class will be working with the hydroponics experiment kit as well as recreation of a white rat experiment that will demonstrate the positive effect of milk consumption.

Sue Delling, principal and math teacher also of St. Vincent's reiterated how important it is for the children to realize where their food comes from. The date and statistics she gathered while visiting various farms and orchards will be incorporated into her 8th grade math classes. In cooking class, students made old-fashioned ice cream.

County Commissioner Tony Herzog, commented on the disappointing turn of events associated with the Northeast Dairy Compact. The democratic process was sidetracked by one official who was able to stall the bill in committee. On a positive note, Commissioner Herzog congratulated the group on the recent passage of ACT 50, Local Tax Reform issue. He felt strongly that improving property tax relief for farmers is a very important issue.

In regional news Jeff Groves reported the "Farmer to Farmer" program is successful. Farmers seek to establish good rapport with the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) in order to develop mutual understanding and maintain open communication lines.

Agco Dealers Get Training

ATLANTA, Ga — Agco dealers got a first-hand look at the new Fieldstar Precision Farming System , with all the trimmings, during a series of training sessions held across the Midwest this spring.

"If you can point and touch, you can use Fieldstar," said Craig Fenstermaker, who along with Dion Hake, conducted the training sessions. Fenstermaker and Hake are Agco product specialists covering Iowa and Illinois.

"Fieldstar is the most comprehensive, tested, and user-friendly precision farming system on the market today," Fenstermaker told the dealers. "Better yet, it's the most accurate system out there."

He points to Fieldstar's four exclusive features that keep the system in step with the accuracy and convenience needs of the growing trend to precision farming:

- Touch screen display, called the "DataTouch™" command center, that lets operators monitor harvesting data and combine performance with just the tap of a finger
- Large screen display area for easy monitoring of data – largest display on the market.
- Unique marker system that lets the combine operator mark and map specific portions of the field, such as weed patches and wet spots, for follow-up management.
- Optional in-cab printer for producing instant "hard copy" records while "on-the-go."

The Fieldstar precision farming system is available for Agco brand combines including rotary and conventional models of Gleaner and selected models of Massey Ferguson.

"I think it's the wave of the future," said dealer Don Koshatka, of Clet Koshatka Farm Equipment in Protivin, Iowa.

"The Fieldstar system has a lot of experience behind it. They've improved on the technology, and, according to the charts and graphs we reviewed, this system exceeds what's in the marketplace.

"We have a farmer who's already purchased one for a new MF8780 rotary combine," he said.

Green Industry IPM Program Reduces Pesticide Use In Pa.

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Groundskeepers these days are spraying fewer pesticides around public parks and gardens, schools, arboretums, and residential and commercial properties in the greater Philadelphia area.

That's because landscape managers and contractors in the region are learning about integrated pest management (IPM), thanks to the Southeast Pennsylvania IPM Research Group, an innovative partnership among Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, the University of Delaware, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, and the southeastern Pennsylvania "green" industry.

The Southeast Pennsylvania IPM Research Group is a model public-private collaboration that is helping to promote the use of IPM in eight counties in Pennsylvania and one county in Delaware. IPM incorporates scientific information, proactive cultural practices, and a host of control tactics to manage pests, and often minimizes pesticide use.

Traditionally, IPM programs are initiated by researchers at land-grant universities and other institutions who study crop and pest systems and develop new pest management methods. The cooperative extension system typically distributes the information to growers and teaches them the new methods.

However, this program has put a twist on tradition, involving producers and concultants in planning and carrying out the research. The group draws members from the private sector, including nurserymen, landscapers, arborists, and public and commercial grounds managers. Work is organized and facilitated by Penn State Cooperative Extension agents Dave Suchanic and Emelie Swackhamer and Delaware Cooperative Extension specialist Susan Barton, with advice and oversight from Penn State and University of Delaware researchers and Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture specialists.

The organization focuses first on forecasting key plant and pest events. By observing weather conditions, plant development and pest populations, specialists often can predice the timing and severity of pest outbreaks. Control measures, such as pesticides, then can be used only when necessary.

The group also is making strides in education by offering in-depth workshops on specific pests, a weekly bulletin, pest walks, biannual IPM conferences, consumer IPM fact sheets and an upcoming site on the Internet.

The results of the program are promising. For example, subscribers to the group's weekly scouting projects have drastically reduced routine, preventive pesticide spraying — now members spray only as needed. In addition, 70 percent of these subscribers have adopted IPM-type programs.

Suchanic said the group makes the most of limited resources, sharing the cost of weather-monitoring equipment and other supplies. "We're doing some pretty good work on a shoestring budget," he said. "Penn State's Department of Entomology also has contributed key resources."

In addition, the group is advised by cooperative extension experts from Penn State and the University of Delaware, as well as specialists from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture to ensure that experimental designs and data analyses are correct. "Our research is planned by the people who will use the results, so we are pretty sure to address the right problems," Suchanic said. "And with a dedicated group of technical advisors behind us, we can be confident our group is addressing the problems correctly.

Two Grant Programs For Northeast Producers

BURLINGTON, Vt. — Applications are available for the Northeast Region Sustainable Agriculture Research and Education (SARE) Program's 1999 farmer grants.

Northeast SARE offers two kinds of grants to producer-initiated and managed projects that will advance knowledge about alternative production and marketing practices.

"These grants provide a wonderful opportunity for farmers interested in evaluating new ideas," said Northeast SARE Program Coordinator Fred Magdoff. "Many farmers and growers have had an idea but didn't have the time or the resources to fully test it. Here's a program which helps farmers to try something new that may end up significantly helping their farms."

Through the seven-year-old Farmer/Grower Grant Program, SARE helps producers conduct farm-based experiments to answer their own production and marketing questions. Farmer/Grower Grant proposals may address any food, non-food or forest crop production or marketing issue. Project activities may include small research trials, educational activities and demonstrations.

Through its two-year-old SEED (Special Evaluation, Education and Demonstration) initiative, Northeast SARE will provide grants to producers willing to farm-test selected, alternative practices. Previous SARE-supported research has shown that these practices improve farm profitability, reduce pesticide use, protect soil, and/or enhance quality of life.

The goal of both programs is to develop and refine systems and practices that promote stewardship of natural resources, prevent agricultural pollution and improve farm profitability.

Northeast SARE will award up to $150,000 through its producer grant programs. Grants will be awarded on a competitive basis to farmers in the 12-state region. In the past, grants have ranged from $300 to about $8,000.

Reviewers will give preference to proposals that clearly define local sustainable agriculture problems or issues and propose solutions. Projects must be led by one or more producer, include a professional technical advisor (an extension agent, for example) and outline a plan for sharing gained information with others in the community.

Any producer within the Northeast is eligible to apply; however, proposals based at research or educational institutions are not eligible for farmer grants. Proposals from those institutions are eligible for funding through SARE's two other grant programs. (For more information on those programs, contact the SARE office at 802-656-0471.)

The Northeast region includes Connecticut, Delaware, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont, West Virginia, and Washington, D.C.

All farmer grant applications must be postmarked by Dec. 11, 1998. Decisions will be announced in March 1999.

To obtain a grant application, visit our website at http://www.uvm.edu/~nesare/, call (802) 656-0471 or write Northeast SARE at 10 Hills Building, University of Vermont, Burlington, VT 05405-0082.

You know the advantages of hi-moisture shelled corn versus dry corn for animal feeding. So now consider the many advantages of POURED CONCRETE to store and protect your valuable grain

"Our 6" thick concrete walls reflect 38% of light beams, resulting in 780 times more heat-resisting ability than steel, and 25 times more insulating power than steel."

"Our 6" thick walls have a very low leak potential compared to prefab silos of any kind, and a very low maintenance requirement."

Cut stall clean-out time by 50% with a Millcreek Compact Spreader.

EARL SINKS - Brock, Texas

Say "Good-Bye" to back-breaking manure handling and cut stall clean-out time in half. Hook an affordable Millcreek Compact Spreader to your 10 hp garden tractor, take it right to the stall for easy loading. No more wheelbarrow.

Millcreek Spreaders last and last

Since spreaders are our specialty, we put more into each one. For example our 20-year guaranteed floor will never rust or rot. Positive chain drive provides excellent spreading action. And tough steel construction holds up to rugged farm use. Seven sizes, for 1-horse barns to 50-horse stables. PTO and ground drive models available.

Announcing New Products for Dairy, Swine & Poultry Producers.
With the addition of our new soybean processing facility, we now offer these products to meet your nutritional needs. Manufacturing these products ourselves allows us to utilize locally grown soybeans and support our local agricultural community!
GOLDEN PRO 46 XP
This natural, mechanically extruded and expelled soybean product is experiencing great acceptance with local dairymen. A course golden colored meal with a 6% fat content, Golden Pro 46 XP is extremely palatable. Golden Pro 46 XP is a natural way to bring the value of high by-pass protein into diets that require a lower fat level.
CRUDE SOYBEAN OIL
A product of Keystone's expelling process, this oil can be used in a wide variety of on farm applications. A natural alternative to animals fats, this oil provides needed energy in various rations.
GOLDEN MEAL 40
An 18 percent fat content along with a 40 percent crude protein makes this mechanically extruded meal product a valuable component in a variety of rations. Full fat content gives you a high level of digestible energy, while high temperature extruding ruptures the oil cells for better nutritional absorbtions.
To make these products available, and to help you utilize your home raised soybeans Keystone Mills announces its Soybean Exchange Program
As manufacturers and distributers of Golden Pro 46 XP and Golden Meal 40, we are anxious for you to try our products. We are offering a soybean exchange program featuring these quality nutritional products.
